speak good English. Reading the best literature and listening to well educated people are both great means of helping her, especially if she offers both the sincere flatery of imitation.

There are a good many every-day faults in speaking, which one hears often from the lips of people in different stations of life. They are the weeds of speech, and the moment one is recognized it should be promptly pulled up by the roots and cast aside.

The curtailing and alteratios of certain words is not pretty. Say an "invitation." not an "invite." a "face" not a "phiz;" or, worse still, a "mug;" a "cousin," not a "coz;" and remember to say "photograph," and not "photo."

That poor word "got" is often sadly used, or rather misused. It is wrong to say that A is "going to get married," she is "going to be married;"

and you can express your meaning quite as well by "I have a brother" as by "I have got a brother." People who speak good English avoid long words, and prefer saying "buy" to "purchase."

"house" to 'residence." "begin" to

"sherry wine" or "carriage drives."

but "sherry" and a "drive." They also recollect to apply "ride" to its proper use. "They "ride" a bicycle, a horse or doskey, but they "drive" in a carriage, team, or omnibus, and "travel" in a train. There are some expressions which are not pretty or indicative of gentle breeding. I dislike the word "vulgar" so very much that I must denote these expressions by the

"That at is in the fire." an expressive of a quarrel or scene is much used by uneducated people, who also speak of "outings," and worse still, "airings."

Instead of saying, "I got that pattern from," they say, "I had it off her."

which sounds very bad indeed. In al-

'girl," or, "Miss A keeps two girls," but use the word 'maid." or servants.

It is better to say, "I had to stay indoors," and "stay at home," rather than "stop at home." The words

"stylish" and "genteel," are equally objectionable words. "Father" and

"Mother" are far preferable to "papa" and "mamma," and the latter words sound very foolish in the mouths of those who have passed childhood. In speaking of your parents to acquaintances say "my mother," "my father," not omitting the possessive pronoun;

When anyone is speaking to you, do not jog them by saying "yes, yes" con. stantly; it is not polite. Let them take their own time for saying what they want to say. As for slang, a little bit of it is perhaps permissible nowadays from girls who in formen years would have been greatly condemned for using any. However, it is well to use a little discrimination for a great deal of slang used by school boys, men, or others, is very unsuitable to a girl. A peculiar expression used by some people should be avoided, and that is "out." Some persons when they are goin away for a holiday, or to leave the place they are in, say they are going "out.". If they said they were "going out of town" it was quite correct: but "out" by itself is ugly and incorrect. To hear a person and foolish on the face of the matter.

You may say, "I dired," or "lunched", or "breakfasted," but never "tead;"

you must say, "had tea." The habit which obtains among some people of nipping off the "g's" is extremely ugly

To hear of "travelin'," "sittin'," goin', etc., grates on one's ear, as all incorrect speech does, or ought to do. Ruskin says: "A well educated gentle-

> A Farmer's Furniture Destroyed and Peris Green put in the Food His house Twice Fired.

IT'S A MYSTERY.

Bowmanville, Dec. 8. - The entire countryside is excited over the disgraceful conduct of four young men, who on Sunday, according to the story of the hired girl, Ida Knight, disguised with masks, entered the dwelling of J. Frank Osborne, two miles east of Bowmanville, while Mr. and Mrs. Osborne were absent, and, after driv-ing the servant girl upstairs, began to destroy the furniture. After cutting the carpets, destroying valuable pictures, etc., the visitors attempted to poison the family by mixing Paris green with the flour, oatmeal, and other breadstuffs. They spread the poison on pies, bread and apples, and then decamped.

As the time approached for Mr. and Mrs. Osborne to return from church, the villains disappeared in the dark-ness. Mr. Osborne went to Thomas Gibson; his nearest neighbor, and gave the alarm, and soon a party of men searched the outbuildings, but ould see no one. Shortly after midnight the Osborne amily retired, and rested till about 2 a. m., when the servant girl gave an alarm of fire. Mrs. Osborne rushed downstairs first, quickly followed by Mr. Osborne, who took the precaution o partly dress himself. They found a eap of straw and some papers ablaze the kitchen, which was densely filled with smoke, and apparently in a very few minutes more the house would have been on fire. Just here is a deep mystery, for the door could hardly have been opened from the outside.

A lot of scraps of writing, letters, etc., were picked up in one of the rooms, which left no doubt at the time in the mind of Mr. Osborne as to the identity of one of the culprits. The servant girl was threatened in one of these stray slips of paper found with dire punishment if she told her em-ployer certain things concerning a particular young man.

The discovery of the Paris green was luding to servants, do not say, "the made on Monday morning when, after breakfast, Ida Knight was taken very ill with vomiting, and as she was the only one who had drunk tea for breakthe tea canister was examined, and traces of the poison were discover-Further careful search revealed the application of this poison in the other things mentioned, none of which, very fortunately, had been used for the morning meal.

These particulars, with the scraps of writing, were all placed in the pos-session of Chief Richard Jarvis to-day, who has a warrant for the arrest of the suspected young man.

Later developments diverted attention from the man first suspected. Mr. and Mrs. Osborne went to milk last night between 5 and 6 o'clock, and when they returned to the house they found the coal bin ablaze, some one having poured the oil from the coal oil can on to the coal and set fire to it. As a step towards finding out the culprit, the police went down to Clarke and arrested Fred Knight, broher of the servant girl, on suspicion A peculiarity of this case is that the servant girl has been one of the principal actors in the mysterious af-fair throughout, and no strangers have been seen about the place.

A RIDGETOWN MYSTERY.

An Alleged English Dector who Re fuses to Give his Nome, says He was Drugged and Robbed.

Toronto Star.

The Attorney-General's Department The Attorney-teneral's Department is investigating a somewhat mysterious case of robbery in Ridgetown.

"I wish," said the medical health officer, "that you would call the attention of the public to schedule A, rule one, of the public health act, which reads as follows: The medical health officer shall pro vide each medical practitioner, prac-tising within his medical health municipality, with blank forms on which to report to the said Medical officer, health officer (or secretary) any case of diphtheria, small-pox, scarlet fever, cholera, typhoid fever, measles, whooping-cough or other disease dangerous to the public health; and, also, other blank forms on which to report death or recovery from any such dis ease.

"Now I consider an epidemic of of chicken-pox, when small-pox is in the neighborhood, a disease dangerous to the public health, and Istrongly urge that all cases of chickempox be reported to me so that I can disinfect and isolate each case so that this disease may be stamped out. I would call the special attention of itizens, physicians, and principals of chools to this request of mine. if all cases of chicken-pox are taken care of, the city board of health will be in a much better position to detect and care for any small-pox cases that might break out."

TAKE WARNING

How an Indistinctly Spoken Funera OrationiWas Printed.

The following occurrence in a Western town is an illustration of the amusing result of the lack of clear enunciation on the part of a speaker. In preaching the funeral sermon over remains of a prominent citizen, who had had quite a chequered career and at various times in his life had been pioneer preacher, mayor, druggist and deputy sheriff, and had several times been instrumental in quelling disturbances which had arisen from religious differences existing between the two local churches, the pastor used the following words:

"Our brother is in the cold ground. no more a sad dangler on life's tide. I can see his panting spirit sigh among the chaste stars contemplating the failure of his acts to make clean our hearts, and methinks I see his noble lineaments imprinted on every rock, tree and fence in this county, with whose history he is so closely connected. During the recent controversies of our people. I have heard him declare, while his beard descending swept his bosom, that he wished, all differences of sects might be ended and while he was a Mayor frequently made himself hourse on the subject. His attempts to stop our riots resulted in his removal from office by foul deceit. Ob, studied deceit! I was with him when he received the news of his impeachment and heard his words. His cry moved me to tears, but he quickly recovered, and his face resumed its natural airy, artless look. As you know, he could pain nobody."

The oration, as it appeared the fol-Iowing week in the local paper, was as

"Our brother is in the coal ground, no more a sad angler on life's tide. I can see his spanking spirit's eye among the chase tars, contemplating the failure of his axe to make lean our hearts, and methinks I see his noble liniments imprinted on every rock, tree and fence in this county, with whose sistery he is so closely connected. During the recent controversies of our people I have heard him declare, while his beer descending swept his bosom, that he wished all differences of sex might be ended, and, while he was a major frequently made himself horse on the subject. His attempts to stop our rights resulted in his removal from office by foul deceit. Oh! Study deceit! I was with him when he re-ceived the news or his impeachment and heard his words. His crime moved me to tears, but he quickly recovered, and his face resumed its natural hairy, heartless look. As you know, he could pay nobody."-N. Y. Sun.
