SATURDAY, NOV. 23 1872.

"SPEAK NOW!"

There is at least one Grit paper in the Province shrewd enough to see and candid enough to admit that lofty silence is not the proper answer for Mr McKellar to make to serious charges backed up by authentic documents and damning facts. The Seaford Expositor, referring to the Elgin frauds, has the courage to say—

"The charge is a most serious one, and has been repeatedly and persistently made, and by doing himself and those who trust in him an injustice. No matter how outrageously absurd a charge may be if it is persistently repeated without being refuted, there are many who will ultimately come to believe it. We therefore think it is just to himself, and to the public, to give to the public the 'inside' of the case. We advise this course the more strongly, because we know that already the constant and unchecked repetition of these charges by the 'Mail' and other prints, are having an injurious effect upon Mr. McKellar's reputation."

We are quite prepared to admit that if the charges were made simply upon the authority of the Mail, the HERALD and other journals politically opposed to the bucolic Minister of Fall Ploughing he might do the silent contemptible business with some propriety and considerable effect, but when proofs of his complicity are produced—written documents signed with his own hand—and when the defence of his partner in the speculation consists merely in charges against "faithless agents" who are not named and in buncombe appeals to the goddess of Liberty, the conclusion that forces itself upon any mind free from prejudice is that the charges are true and the defence, bad as it is, the best that could be made! The Expositor is right in its conclusion that Mr. McKellar's reputation is suffering from his silence, but if possible, it suffers still more from the pleadings of the Rev. Mr. King, who may be a well-intentioned man, but whose puerile arguments evince a mind not very fairly balanced upon strict questions of what is right or wrong in business matters. The longer the people reflect upon the transaction exposed the more overwhelming will become the conviction that there was something rotten in the Elgin Association.

Seeing a Sister's Apparition and then Hearing of Her Sudden Death.

From the Providence Journal.
A young lady from New York has been visiting relatives in this city during the past two weeks, and had made arrangements to return home last Friday night, having a strong impression upon her mind that she must go home without delay. For the sake of the company of a relative on her journey home, however, she was induced to postpone her departure until Monday evening last. On Sunday morning, after a quiet night's rest, she was suddenly awakened between 3 and 4 o'clock, and saw a figure distinctly, or was convinced that she did, standing in her room, near the door, looking toward her. The figure bore an exact resemblance to a sister she left at home in New York in her usual health. The young lady got up and went toward the apparition, and it disappeared. She then opened a window and looked out, but seeing nothing more of the figure, or anything else unusual, she returned to her room and fell asleep again. In a short time she was awakened and saw the apparition of her sister again, with the same life-like appearance and in the same position as before. She got up again, and as she advanced toward it it receded from her approach, and disappeared as before. Again she looked about from room to room and out of the window, but saw nothing more of it. Being now too much excited to sleep longer, she dressed herself, and remained sitting up in her chamber waiting for daylight. Her uncle, who is an early riser, heard her moving about the room and on his inquiring why she was up so early, she related her experience as stated above, and when the family had risen it was the subject of general remark and comment. On Sunday noon the young lady received a despatch from New York, informing her that her sister had died suddenly at the very hour the apparition appeared in her chamber.

BREAKING THE BONDS.—A daughter of Rothchild is about to break through the traditions of the family by marrying a man who is neither a relative nor Jew. The almost royal respectability of the family is very much scandalized by the wrongheadedness of the wayward young lady, but love, it seems, is stronger than duty in this case, and Miss Rothchild is determined to marry the man of her affections. The fortunate prospective bridegroom is said to be the Hon Mr. Yorke, son of the Earl of Harlow. The dislike of the lady's father to the match is increased by his failure to discover in him any qualities of either head or heart which justifies his daughter's fondness for him, but the old man isn't in love and the young lady is, which makes a great difference.

Father Newman.

Father Newman has given a speedy denial to the story which, circulated in whispers for the last three years in England, has at last been put into print by Mr. Capes in the Guardian, and circulated by the newspapers and correspondents of England and America. Father Newman claims that, so far from being in disagreement with the head of the Church and the Council of the Vatican on the subject of Papal infallibility, he himself promulgated that dogma in 1852, in his "Discourses, on University Education," delivered in Dublin. He quotes a passage from one of these discourses, reprinted at Rome by Father Cardella in 1867, with the author's permission, in which these words occur: "Deeply do I feel, ever will I protest, for I can appeal to the ample testimony of history to bear me out, that, in questions of right and wrong, there is nothing really strong in the whole world, nothing decisive and operative, but the voice of him to whom have been committed the keys of the kingdom and the oversight of Christ's flock. That voice is now, as ever, it has been, a real authority, infallible when it teaches." (The italics are Newman's.) Numerous sentences are given to other works of the writer, which like reasoning appears. As to the charge that Father Newman has converted himself by some quibble into accepting what his heart could not believe, and that the operation had cost him considerable pain, he says in the present letter: "It is true I was deeply though not personally pained both by the fact and by the circumstances of the definition; and when it was in contemplation I wrote a most confidential letter, which was surreptitiously gained and published, but which I have not a word to retract. The feelings of surprise and concern expressed in that letter have nothing to do with a screwing one's conscience to profess what one does not believe, which is Mr. Capes' pleasant account of me. He ought to know better."

A Telegraph Pole.

An Ancient authority tells us to look for beauty in the old cat's face. Granting that this is an unlikely object for aesthetic admiration, we are still more surprised at its being an object of beauty. But on contemplating the poles recently erected by the Dominion Telegraph Company on Church and Wellington streets we are forced to admit that such an unpromising subject is capable of being "artistic." The beauty of this line principally consists in the arrangement of the cross pieces, and viewed from a little distance our reader will find for himself that the poles in question are graceful and pleasing. One thing leads to another, from the poles without we were led to make some enquiries respecting the working of the Company within, and we were not less astonished than pleased at the extraordinary progress this Company has been making lately. In the published statement submitted at the general meeting held in January, 1871, it was shown that up to that period 629 miles of poles had been erected, 1,119 miles of wire had been strung, and thirty-three offices put in operation. During the year we learn that the pole mileage has been increased from 629 to 1,175 miles; the mileage of wire from 1,116 to 2,265, and fifty additional offices have been opened, raising the whole number to eighty-three in the Province of Ontario. Since the date of that report (the 14th of February last) the number of offices has risen to two hundred, and from twelve to fourteen hundred additional miles of wire are strung, so that now the company taps all the trunk lines and has offices thickly sprinkled throughout the entire province. This speaks well for the enterprise of the Company and the accommodation afforded to the public. With respect to the gentlemanly courtesy of the officers at all times display, it is not requisite to speak, for all who have had any dealings with the Company are fully aware of this pleasing feature.

We will in future respect a telegraph pole, for the contemplation of this particular one led to our acquiring the above very pleasing information.—Exchange.

SWEET.—"Come in, there's a fire in the parlor," were the whispered words we heard while passing a house on one of our principal streets last evening.—It is such little courtesies as these that increase fuel dealers' profits, elevate and to the confectionery business to over six story wedding cakes before the winter is over. They are lovely.
