unthinking, or rather of these qualified to think, and o judge, and of those who from a variety of contingoucies, are unable to comprehend and decide upon uniters confessedly of great intricacy, and sometimes builing the understanding of the most informed and considerate. How many of those whom it is purpoed to pseemble on Thursday, are capable of forming a correct decision on two questions, upon which, men the most enlightened, the most informed, and best

Who will appear on the platform there capable of enlightening the ignorance of the great mass of those present? particularly if it be as anticipated, and foundly wished, a monster meeting— like all monsters, deficient in intellect, and obedient

o the caprice of the moment, rather than the voice

And in what time is this monster meeting to be con-vinced of the necessity of instructing their represen-tatives to pursue one particular course in preference to another? Six hours at the very outside, during which time, some but those immediately round the hustings or the platform will have heard one word in ten. How many persons will be able or willing, to address this highly respectable and enlightened audience? It will soon be seen who are, or are likely assionce? It will soon be seen who are, or are likely to be the majority, and as usual at all those miscellaneous assemblages those who are at fill thely to be in the minority, will be hooted, interrupted, and cried down, a small mob of partiadus around the hustings will easily effect this. How many of those present who can hear will be able to comprehend the arguments, if they condescend to use any, or even the language, of the speakers? how many who understand english insperfectly and who will have no one capable of enlightening them as to what is going on, and isstly what will be the proportion of those who are really and truly electors and those who are not? Under all these circumstances therefore, what ought Under all these circumstances therefore, what ought to be the conduct of the members elect? Simply, we to be the conduct of the members elect? Simply, we should say, to hear all and say nothing. This will be a party meeting without doubt, and even if it were not, it could not be expected to express the sentiments of the majority of the Electors. It may, and probably will happen, that those who take a different view of the matter, will call a meeting at another and more leisure time, more numerously attended than who needlessly allows fetters to be placed upon his hands or his feet, can hardly be said to be in his perfect mind, as little can he be said to be wise, who puts or suffers fetters to be put upon his will or his tongue. It is the duty of the Representatives of the first District of King's County to avoid giving pledges to either party, as much as it is their duty to hear what either side advance, and to give to both their most careful consideration. They will in this case go into Parliament free and unfettered, and of consequence looked up to with respect. If they make themselves the tools of a party, and that composed of not the most canable and entiretened of their conof. not the most sensible and enlightened of their constituents, and led by others not themselves, the reverse will inevitably follow. We have hitherto taken it for granted, that, the members elect will not be so far forgetful of their own dignity, as to think of attending a meeting, the calling of which implies a want of confidence, or a desire to dictate, though indeed there is another and very cogent reason why, they should appear there, and this is simply, because they are not invited, it being the electors and not the Blackwoop's Magazine for August contains some very excellent and interesting articles.

"The narcotics we indulge in" is an ably written paper but is the first only of n prominent continuation. The narcotic qualities of Tobacco and the Hop are those treated of; we do not agree with the writer but will suspend our judgement till we see the continuation. "South American Travel and adventure," will repay the perusal. The episode of the Equina is highly wrought and touching in the extreme. "Napoleon and Sir Hudson Love." This is a review of a book published by John Forsyth M. A. entitled "The History of the Captivity of Napoleon at St. Helena" it is intended as a vindication of the conduct of Sir Hudson Lower against the calumnies of the French and other writers, and the reviewer sums up the character of the lock in the Callenia and the contraction of the conduct of the character of the lock in the Callenia and the contraction of the conduct of the character of the lock in the Callenia and the contraction of the conduct of the character of the lock in the Callenia and the contraction of the conduct of the character of the lock in the Callenia and the contraction of the conduct of the character of the lock in the Callenia and the conduct of the conduct of the character of the character of the callenia and the conduct of the callenia and the conduct of the callenia and the callenia a against the calumnies of the French and other writers, and the reviewer sums up the character of the book in the following passage, "Mr. Forsyth's style is admirably fitted for his subject—fair, forcible, and argumentative. By his work he has done credit to himself, and nis work no has done credit to missel, and cleared the character of a brave, an honest, and a high-minded English soldier and gentleman. We know no ampler panegyric on the uses or the successes of authorship."

"New Readings of Shakespear." Those who admire the national drammatist, and who does admire the national drammatis, and who does not!—will find much to amuse as well as inte-rest under this head.
