Thisler of Kansas, and from actual experience I find that the greatest mistake made by the average farmer is careless laxity in selecting sires for breeding purposes. For instance, if a farmer has a rangy mare, he is apt to select a high, rangy horse with which te pair her. This is a great mistake, for the aim should be to select a sire which will tone down the defeats of the day in the colt and sunuly the closed lids is good for them. There are kissing bugs and strangling bugs and candle bugs-bugs to swell the army of cotton's enemies, horned bugs and scaly bugs, bugs repulsive in appearance, bugs poisonous in character and entomelogical freaks without number. Perhaps the most obvious way of accounting for this visitation is to attribute it to the increased use of plumage for the adornment of women's bonnets and hats. At any rate this is a good cause to be made the subject of of our complaints till some one can suggest a more plausible one. If a child needs nourishment, one of Perfect Fit Guaranteed, simplest forms in which it can be taken is by the raw whites of eggs. These are nutritious and easily digested. We like the hearty, healthy boy who has thoughts, and can express them and who can tone down his superabundant strength within bounds. And we should also like to see these boys courteous and unselfish, anxious to help others. These are traits which are more valuable to boy or girl than quantities o money, or a fine personal appearance.

Every individual animal, male or female, has a character of fortable existence.—Providence Journal. some kind to transmit with some modifications, to its offspring. This character may be positive, negative or neutral, but whatever it is something should be known about it before it is used for reproduction, for heredity has much to do with traits and character in animais. For this reason great care should be taken to know that animals have good characters as well as good constitutions. A vicious horse or colt is apt to breed vicious offspring, and a weakly constituted animal is sure to breed offspring of weak vitality. Vitality or constitution cannot be fed into an animal; it must be bred. No infallible rules can be laid down with reference to the age at which different classes of stock may be bred. The short lived races, like swine and sheep, arrive at maturity in much less time than horses and cattle, but even in the case of the shorter lived animals it is best to await the period of reasonably mature developement if the best results are expected. Generally a sow or ewe is as fully developed at 1 year as a heifer or filly at

Women have begun to understand that Maternity at a tender age is a severe strain upon the animal, and it often interferes seriously with the subsequent growth and developement. An animal stunted during growth by any cause seldom fully overcomes the effect, no matter what the after treatment may be. Especially when breeding to improve the stock it is best to wait until the animals are reasonably well matured, as the value of the offspring may be predicted with less risk of disappointment. hollow eyes and worn faces attendant upon prolonged social dissipations, and
