The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

Suppose you were about to cross a little bridge which, although you did not know it, was rotten and would have given way beneath you, and let you fall into the river and drown.

And suppose, just as you came near to the bridge, you should fall and break your arm and turn back and not try to cross the bridge.

Wouldn't you have been fortunate rather than unfortunate?

What does all that mean?

It just means that I want to suggest a new point of view, that has recently come to me, upon an old matter.

And the only matter is the seeming injustice of it that for "the sin that they do by two and two" each equally to blame, and more likely the man more than the woman, the man goes apparently unpunished while the woman bears all the consequences.

Not long ago it was my duty to talk to a woman who was brought into the public interest by an unsuccessful attempt to lose in the city streets the little baby that should never have come to her.

"This girl absolutely refused to tell the name of the baby's father and let him suffer even the small portion of disgrace that the world's opinion allots to the man.

I went home from that bitter talk against the injustice of it all, and then I began to wonder if I and the rest of us who see things that way, aren't a bit shortsighted.

Isn't it better to break one's arm than to go on over the bridge and fall into the river?

Isn't immediate punishment sometimes a blessing?

I know a man who can't drink a single glass of whiskey without being desperately nauseated. When he was a boy of about nineteen he drifted in with a very fast crowd. And this inability to drink without immediate suffering, which he naturally regarded as a great misfortune, was his salvation.

I know a woman who can't offend the laws of health in the slightest degree without having an intensely sick headache. The natural result is that she is very careful not to overeat or overwork or under-sleep or do any of the things that bring this swift and terrible retribution.

She doesn't think so, but isn't she really more fortunate than those of us who go on offending for half a lifetime unrebuked and then are finally obliged to pay up our arrears of carelessness by months or even years of suffering and dependence?

Then, are things so very much worse for our sex after all?

The woman learns a cruelly searing but perhaps life saving lesson. The man sees only a cruelly attractive exterior of his offense, and not the white sepulchre for soul and body and life and ambition and happiness that may lie beneath.

Who can dare to say that instead of being "Marry, pity women," it ought rather to be, "Marry, pity men?"

Ruth Cameron

Women's Secrets

There is one man in the United States who has perhaps heard more women's secrets than any other man or woman in the country. These secrets are not secrets of guilt or shame, but the secrets of suffering, and they have been confided to Dr. R. V. Pierce in the hope and expectation of advice and help. That few of these women have been disappointed in their expectations is proved by the fact that ninety-eight per cent. of all women treated by Dr. Pierce have been absolutely and altogether cured. Such a record would be remarkable if the cases treated were numbered by hundreds only. But when lion women, in a practice of over 40 years, it is phenomenal, and entitles Dr. Pierce to the gratitude accorded him by women, as the first specialist in the treatment of women's diseases.

Every sick woman may consult Dr. Pierce by letter, absolutely without charge. All replies are mailed, sealed in perfectly plain envelopes, without any printing or advertising whatever, upon them. Write without fear as with-out fee, to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, Pres., Buffalo, N. Y.

DR. PIERCE'S FAVORITE PRESCRIPTION Makes Weak Women Strong, Sick Women Well.

Fads and Fashions.

The banded skirt, if the band is drawn in too tightly, is rather absurd, but reasonably proportioned, it is becoming a welcome novelty, where novelty is most sought in skirt designs.

It is not likely that the Persian craze will wane before the autumn, as the fall and winter fabrics will include some beautiful and unique combinations in Persians in velvets and other rich textures.

Narrow black velvet ribbons are to be used in several rows as edge trimmings on afternoon gowns. Light colored velvet ribbon from one to two inches wide will be used on satin and chiffon evening gowns.

The tiny marquis parasol, covered with Chantilly lace, with which old-time dames protected their complexions when driving, is coming in again for carriage use, and it has the old folding pearl handle.

The present mode of coat closings—low, shawl like collars with three or four large buttons for closing below—will undoubtedly continue through the winter, and for this purpose will handsome buttons be in demand.

Several seasons have accustomed us to coats of face and net, but printed organdie is rather a novelty. It is rather attractive, though. A coat of white organdie, printed with bouquets of pink roses, looks well over a lingerie gown.

Ribbons for cointures are Persian patterned with a woven design in gold or silver, associated with narrow black or white satin stripes. Others are of changeable taffeta or moire, and still others are in brilliant pompadour patterns.

The most alluring ribbons, wired along one or both edges, so as to be easily made up into loops or bows, for hats of coiffures, are shown in the shops. The wire edged ribbon is a thoroughly practical help in quick millinery.

Narrow pleatings of tulle make a most attractive finish to the collarless blouse or simple house dress. Similar pleatings, turned back and caught with a few invisible stitches, are the finish to sleeves which reach just below or above the elbow, as one's fancy dictates.

We are again seeing a good deal of cut steel in ornaments, shaped on the lines of those which were worn in the eighteenth century. There are pendants, slides, buttons, buckle and bag and eyeglass mounts, and charming slides to wear on velvet throatslets, which add such charm to a collarless or low, round-necked toilette.

Some of the dainty lingerie gowns are made with a band of wide lace insertion, just below the knees. A fold of wide ribbon is fastened to the Princess slip, so as to form a background to the insertion. A chou or loops and ends of the ribbon are fastened to the gown insertion itself a little to one side of the front.

Sick Fishermen Arrive

Honored by Many.

Beautiful and deeply impressive in their solemnity and formality were the ceremonies which marked the funeral services for the memory of Father Hayden in this city last Thursday and Friday. No greater honor and show of affection for a departed resident has ever been displayed here than was evident on that occasion. Clergymen, citizens, merchants and business men of the city united with the members of St. Simon's parish in honoring the memory of a good priest and a worthy citizen.

One of the most touching tributes was that of the children of the parochial school of whom Father Hayden was very fond, seeming never happier in life than when invited to join in a game of ball or friendly contest they might be enjoying. Soon after the body of the departed priest was placed in state in St. Simon's church Thursday the children from the school marched to the edifice to say the rosary and then their childish voices three hundred and fifty strong rose to the vaulted ceiling in the strains of the priest's favorite hymn "Sweet Name Which Make the Dying Live."

The memorial services were marked by the presence of Bishop Richter of Grand Rapids and forty-five priests from the diocese, the latter of whom said vespers Thursday afternoon after his body was taken to the church. It is said that fully 3,000 people passed down the aisles that afternoon to bid a final farewell to the deceased. An honorary guard from the C. M. B. A. and Knights of Columbus remained at the church from evening until Friday morning.

Long before the hour appointed for services Friday morning the church and aisles were crowded and standing room could not be found. Bishop Richter celebrated pontifical solemn requiem high mass assisted by the visiting priests who performed the duties of altar boys. Perhaps the most impressive and beautiful feature of the ritual was the "matins lauds" or chant of the visiting priests heard here for the first time, a service which is accorded only departed Catholics and priests of high rank.

The memorial sermon delivered by Father Brown of Grand Rapids touched tender chords in the hearts of all present by his eloquent and glowing tributes to the life and efforts of his departed friend, until even strong men bowed their heads in grief. Probably no clearer conception of the duties and responsibilities of a priest where ever given here than in the impressive words of Father Brown and for those who heard him the Catholic faith now has a deeper significance than ever before. Bishop Richter was so overcome at the close of the service that he was unable to speak further of the departed. With the singing of "Nearer My God to Thee" by Father Mulvey of Alma the impressive rites concluded.

Escorted by the Knights of Columbus, C. M. B. A., altar boys and pall bearers, who included the church committee, A. Polier, D. E. Cartier, Jas. Gavan, Frank Washatka and J. M. Magner, assisted by W. A. Cartier, E. M. Roehrig, Sr., and Jas. Foley, who marched from the church, the remains were taken to the Pere Marquette station after the services to be shipped to Lachine, Ont., for interment. Mrs. Elizabeth Hayden, the sister-in-law of the deceased, and Father Mulvey accompanied the body to Lachine where the deceased's one sister, two brothers and his aged mother were to meet the funeral party. The visiting priests also left the same day for their respective charges. Several hundred members of St. Simon's parish gathered at the depot and stood with weeping eyes watching the train as it moved out of sight bearing the remains of their beloved priest forever from the scenes of his labors—Ludington Chronicle. [Father Hayden was a native of the North Side of Conception Bay, Ed.]
