They cordially invite all their friends and acquaintances, and all without exception, who wish to enjoy a day of unalloyed pleasure in the country to come and join the merriment and partake of the good things the Table Holders are providing in the hope of being able to satiate the most exacting palate.

Come, then, casting all care aside for the nonce and bring a good appetite. You will get one of the exhilarating drive from town, surrounded with the most picturesque scenery and purest air.

TORBAY.

"What a picturesque village! we say As we saunter down by the bay And gaze on its shores— On the swift splashing oars And the boats as they dash through the spray!"

What a prosperous village! and then We wander by fern and thro' fen— By beach and by cliff By crag and thro' rise By the sea so productive to men!

Here they fish in the beautiful bay In sight of their children at play— On the green sunny slopes And the home of their hopes— In sunshine and shade, day by day.

Here's the dear little church on the "rise." The Convent and school they so prize— "The Hall" where repair In their leisure so rare— The lieges in wisdom so wise.

What a prosperous village to-day! What a high model village! we say As we loiter by shores Where the splash of the oars Is merrily heard o'er the bay."—E. C. advt.

Passenger Complains.

Editor The Evening Telegram. Dear Sir—Allow me space in your valuable paper to put before the public how passengers were treated on the Trepassey Branch of the Reid Newfoundland Company's railway.

It happened becoming to the railway on the night following Regatta night, August 7th, 1913. At Bay Bulls Station was a man, his wife and five children, the eldest 7 years and the youngest 7 months. How they were treated it is up to the public to say when they read the facts.

The passengers in question were waiting at the station from 6 o'clock in the evening until 10 o'clock in the night when the train arrived and stopped for a short time. The man, as soon as the train stopped, having two other men to help him put aboard his luggage which occupied a very short time. He then got off to see how his wife, that had three ladies helping her with the children, was getting along, but as he landed on the ground from the platform the train moved ahead. His wife during the time mentioned had just landed the fourth child in the car and was going out on the platform for the infant of 7 months as the train started. Seeing that she had not time to get the infant she naturally became very ill, not knowing what had happened to the child. Her husband spoke to the conductor in charge calling his attention to the condition his wife was in and entreated him to stop the train which by that time was no more than a hundred yards from the station. This he refused to do although there were two lives in danger. The condition of the other children when they found the baby had been left behind can be better imagined than described. They cried most piteously at the conductor not giving them proper notice. If it had not been for a couple of ladies and a gentleman who did all that was possible to console the mother and children it might have been very serious for the mother.

Now, Mr. Editor, if such treatment of passengers and such men in charge of human life is allowed in a civilized country, the sooner legislation is brought to bear on the matter the better for the general public.

Thanking you for space in your valuable paper, I remain, Mr. Editor, Truly Yours,

A DISGUSTED PASSENGER.

Complains of Salmon Laws.

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir—Unless the lock is removed off our salmon fishery the whole northern population of fishermen will be up in arms against the local Government. The Atlantic ocean is fenced off from us by fools and Piccott's emissaries are sent here from Bonavista Bay, St. John's, and Placentia and Conception Bays to earn what little public funds belong to us. We are brought to the verge of starvation by persecutions numerous. Our best salmon posts are locked from us which have been our heritage by birth and have been in our families rights for generations past, inherited by birth from our great grandfathers down to us at present, the rightful owners, and they have robbed us of them. Our rights date back previous to our local Government.

Yours sincerely,

W. C. LACEY.

White Bay, Aug. 18th, 1913.
