The Most Bewitching Display of Early Arrivals in

Ladies', Misses' & Children's Fall & Winter Coats

It is impossible to convey to you the beauty and character of these new garments with mere words. Colors, in the most effective harmony or contrast, produce results that will meet with your instant approval. Many models now shown exhibit dainty style touches that will not be found in later showings, so we urge you to come as soon as you can to see these new creations, and learn from personal inspection, how desirable these early styles are.

Side Talks by Ruth Cameron

A HABIT TO AVOID.

Or, "I had a wretched night last night, the baby, etc."

"Isn't it dreadful—the children have been exposed to the whooping cough."

I never knew this woman to come in on the most exquisite morning in June or the crispest, freshest October day with the heartening words, "Isn't this a wonderful morning."

She always opens her conversation on the note of complaint and self pity.

The People Who Have the Hardest Times Often Complain the Least.

The two things, you know, almost invariably go together. The people who really have the hardest times seldom have so much to say about them. The very rigors of their lives help to develop the kind of character that consumes its own smoke.

This woman, for example, does not have an exceptionally easy life but she most certainly does not have an exceptionally hard one.

I suppose inadequate health supplies part of the explanation as it does of almost every failure or inadequacy, but I cannot help feeling that the wrong mental attitude has something to do with the aura of dissatisfaction and discontent and self pity which seems to hang about this woman.

The older I grow the more I hate certain things both in myself and other people. And one of these growing hates is, as I have told you before, self pity, and another is that most exasperating expression of self pity—whining.

Wouldn't You Rather Hear a Child Howl Than Whine?

I would rather hear a child howl any day than whine. And I think I would rather hear a grown-up curse than whine. Job certainly had some pretty strong things to say about his bad luck but he never whined and I don't remember the Lord was willing to give him back "twice as much as he had before."

The complaining habit which so easily develops into the whining habit is one of the greatest joy killers there is. Though there is no legal penalty for joy killing there must be a moral one. And I think, when it extends over many years, some forms of this crime come near to ranking with ordinary murders.

As If a Candle Had Been Put Out.

When a person like the one I have described enters one's house, instead of one's feeling as if another candle had been lighted one feels as if a candle had been put out or as if a cloud had drifted over the sun.

I believe I have written you about the little girl who had been reproved for whining and surprised her mother by adding to her prayer one night: "Lord keep me from whining. I'm no happier when I whine, therefore why whine?"

She might well have added, "I'm no happier when I whine and everyone about me is a great deal unhappier," mightn't she?

Fashions and Fads.

The evening gown has no sleeves. The bracelet is extremely popular. Jetted blouses will have a great vogue.

The fall blouse will have elbow sleeves.

Suit coats and skirts feature wide pleats.

White is most in demand for day-time dresses.

The black evening gown is losing in popularity.

Ostrich feathers will be used on blouse collars.

For dressy blouses Chantilly is the favorite lace.

The high, reversible collar is shown on blouses.

The cape continues to serve as the evening wrap.

Blouses are being made of fine lace, kimono style.

White Georgette frocks are worn with colored sashes.

LINES TO A SECRET FOE.

I have a foe, a bitter cruel foe, Who mocks at me wherever I may stray;

Makes little of my dreams from day to day, And strives to steal the courage from my brow;

Plants doubts for me to find where'er I go, And bids me flee when I have willed to stay;

Frightens me oft with failure's dread array, And pales my cheek when fear should never show.

He wields no blade of bright and shining steel, He is not mortal, yet this foe is real.

Relentless, heartless, aye and adamant, I would dare much and climb life's parapet

Yet still I stay nor dare to move, beset By one small voice which whispers low: "You can't!"

THE MAN KILLER.

WALT MARON

Along the pleasant highways, and by the rural homes, through cool and shady byways, the snorting terror roams. The auto with a driver who threatens as he drives, who cares no copper stiver for human limbs or lives. The auto, wisely driven, is not innately bad; it is a blessing given to man, to make him glad. When it is sanely guided along the teeming ways, it seldom is derided by bards or kindred jays. But oh, the loosed chuffer who to the highway takes, nor cares how many suffer, so he some record breaks! And oh, the beardless striplings who joyride in the night! 'Twould take some seven Kiplings to sew those lads up right. I hate to turn a corner when I drive out of town, for fear some speedlaw scunner will straightway run me down. The death car's always speeding to maim some helpless hick; and what this country's needling is law that has a kick. When once the fiend, loon witted, some gent or cow has slain, he should not be permitted to drive a car again. Outlaw the reckless drivers, and let them drive no more; and we, the maimed survivors, will cry, "Hurroo! Hurroo!"
