LORD MORDEN'S DAUGHTER — OR — THE TRAGEDY OF THE CEDARS.

CHAPTER XIV.

"My original intention," he thought, "was to see my father, and ask him to keep the promise he made me concerning Lord Morden. As I am practically discarded, pro tem, I will undertake to find out for myself Dora's very safely depends upon it."

He left Greely's at nine o'clock, and mingled with the great mob of city clerks on their way to business. The overloaded omnibuses were groaning under their weight of threadbare humanity, surging toward the vast center, to slave for nine or ten hours, for a mere pittance. It was astonishing how they could be good-humored under such a condition of things, but man is ever hopeful.

Locksley climbed to the roof of one of the clumsy-looking vehicles, which threatened to lurch over at every street corner.

Next to him was seated a thin, shabby-genteel young fellow, with a keen face and bright eyes.

"Fine morning, sir," he observed. "Can you oblige me with a light?" would not ask, only I see that you are smoking."

The bright end of Locksley's cigar was at once dipped into the pipe of the shabby-genteel young man and his thanks followed, between satisfied puffs, and clouds of blue tobacco smoke.

"This," he said, with a laugh, "is my breakfast, and when I run out of tobacco, it is a hard job to get through my work until one o'clock."

"Do you mean to say," questioned Edmund, "that you take no solid food in the morning?"

"It doesn't run to it, sir. I am one of the many living miseries of kind, but mistaken parents. I have been educated to be genteel, with nothing to keep it up. No trade, no profession. The result is grubbing in the office of a bill-broker, private inquiry agent, who is as mean as he is wealthy, for the noble sum of sixteen shillings a week."

Always Tired in the Mornings

MISS M. BECKER, 118 David St., Kitchener, Ont., writes: "My system became generally run down. I was nervous, tired and subject to headaches. After using nine boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I felt like a new person, could sleep and eat well and was relieved of all the old symptoms."

"NERVOUS bankruptcy is being courted by the young women of today," says Dr. Mosher, widely known authority on women's health.

"In her desire to not miss anything she burns the candle at both ends, cutting short her sleep, hurrying or omitting meals."

"This disregard of periods of rest and sleep must necessarily lead to a breakdown of the nervous system, a condition which is the despair of the physician."

Among the early indications of trouble are irritability, restlessness, indigestion, headaches and sleeplessness.

The rational treatment is Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to revitalize the wasted nerve cells. This medicine is so natural and gentle in action and so wonderfully potent as a restorative that you will soon see the benefits derived from its use.

"I had no idea that you were employed here, Mr. Rogers," he said. "Is Mr. Hancox within?"

"No, sir, but he will be here soon. Ten-fifteen is his time. Will you wait?"

"Yes I wish to make inquiries about a gentleman who I believe has been missing for some years."

"Yes, sir. Please step into this office."

The clerk conducted Locksley into an elegantly furnished room, then lingered a moment and hesitated.

"It is hardly right," he said at last, "to interfere with my employer's clients, but you spoke kindly to me, sir, half an hour since, and I would warn you that the most trivial cases here are prolonged over many months, as a rule, until the client's patience or money is exhausted."

"Mr. Hancox is a detective of long experience, I believe," Edmund asked.

Rogers shrugged his shoulders.

"My employer advertises in many ways, and under many names," he said. "He is a bill-broker, a dealer in stocks and shares, a money-lender, a detective," he laughed; "but all the advertisements under the various departments have different names. Only the address is the same. His correct name I believe to be Burton. An ex-policeman, who has done a little time for robbing belated travellers of their watches, is in charge of the detective department, but he is never permitted to interview clients. His name is supposed to be Hancox. The governor manages to get his servants into his power if he can, and they are then his slaves."

A noise at the outer door caused him to dart out of the room, but he returned again, quickly, remarking:

"Only our possession man, we sell furniture on the hire system, and when the last installment or two are due, we jolly the people into the belief that they can pay it at any time. The result is we take advantage of the lapse, and get all our goods, or their goods, back again, and hire it out once more. The man who has just come in attends to that department."

"Disgusting!" was Locksley's comment. "I think I will leave, Mr. Rogers."

"I have not told you this, sir, to benefit myself, but if you care to instruct your inquiries with me I will leave this hateful place at once. I know every system of inquiry."

He watched Locksley's face eagerly, adding:

"That's the governor's step on the stairs!"

"Frank Rogers," replied Edmund, "I believe that you are honest, and am disposed to trust you. Ask for me to-night, at any time, at Greely's Hotel Knightsbridge. I will find you employment, and I think I can afford to double your present salary at once."

Tears of gratitude sprang into the eyes of Rogers, and he could only reply, in choking tones:

"I will be there, sir."

Locksley left the sumptuously furnished office, and came face to face with a middle-aged man, whose very appearance suggested money and importance.

He glanced curiously at the young surgeon, and demanded of his clerk in loud, harsh tones:

"Rogers, did the gentleman wish to see me?"

"He asked for Mr. Detective Hancox, sir, but refused to wait."

"You should have kept him here under any pretense, do it that you are. What name has he left? It is my rule to admit no one into my private office who does not present his card."

"I am aware of that, sir, and the gentleman's name is Locksley. I have not had time to enter it yet," said Rogers.

"Locksley?" exclaimed his employer. "By Heaven! It may be the same! Follow him, Rogers! This is most important! Don't delay an instant. If you lose him you are dismissed without further warning, and without a character, to starve!"

Rogers snatched up his hat, and darted out of the office, lest Mr. Burton should put some one else on the chase, also.

After an absence of two hours he returned, pretending to be very crestfallen.

"Impossible for me to keep pace with a man who came it all over London," he said to his employer. "I accept my dismissal."

He walked away, not heeding the furious voice of Mr. Burton, who was ordering him back to his duties.

Red raw raspy throats

SORE throats are dangerous—as you well know. The danger increases if you delay treatment until you can get home to use a gargle or spray.

Formamint releases in the throat a powerful yet safe antiseptic that destroys germs as no spray or gargle can do because:

It keeps up its action long enough to kill germs.

It can be taken at frequent enough intervals to make the treatment continuous.

To prevent sore throat, and infection from influenza, grippe, tonsillitis—many dangerous diseases—take a Formamint tablet about every two hours. Ask your druggist.

MINARD'S LINIMENT FOR COLDS.

Harbor Grace Notes

Owing to the arrival in port of the two sealing steamers, Sagona and Prospero, within the last week, there has been quite a stir in town, and flippers have been the order of the day. The Sagona having finished discharging her load of seals (5,219), sailed for St. John's on Monday afternoon. The Prospero completed discharging her catch (5,110) Wednesday, and left port last night.

The four-act play entitled "Aunt Susan's Visit" was staged by the pupils and ex-pupils of the Methodist Superior School, in Coughlan Hall, on Tuesday evening last, and proved a fine success. Most of the players were making their first appearance before the footlights, and all acted exceedingly well, while special mention may be made of Miss Marjorie Butt, who was perfectly at home as "Aunt Susan." The large hall was filled, and the sum of one hundred and fourteen dollars was realized as proceeds. Following is the cast of characters:— Aunt Susan, Miss Marjorie Butt; Miss Tibbs, Miss Warren Goodwin; Miss Tibbs, Miss Flora Parsons; Rebecca Jane Tibbs and Mary Alice Tibbs (Daughters), Misses Millicent Parsons and Annie Goodwin; Guy de Marchmont Coggs, Mr. Wallace Webber; Mrs. Tugge, Miss Violet Taylor; Mrs. Highborn, Miss Louise Stevenson; Miss Wiser, Miss Grace Simmons; Senator Samuel Smith, Mr. Fred Parsons.

The annual anniversary service and prize giving of St. Paul's Sunday School was held on Sunday last, Easter Sunday, at 3 p.m. A short programme was gone through, and a goodly number of the parents and friends of the children were present. This is the Thirty-Seventh Anniversary of the opening of the Hall.

The whalers Cabot and Cachelot, owned by the Nfld. Whaling Co., have received a general overhauling preparatory to taking up their summer's work, and are now in readiness for the resumption of the Whaling Fishery. These ships left port early this morning for Rose au Rue, to begin operations.

S.S. Malakoff arrived here from St. John's last week to go on dock, and is at present there undergoing repairs to her rudder post. A number of mechanics came over from the city to attend the repairs. She will likely come off again in a couple of days.

The Mission Band of the Methodist Church held a public meeting at Coughlan Hall on Sunday afternoon last, which was well attended. A very fine programme was given by the members of the Band, and Mrs. Maddock, of Carbonear (the organizer of this branch), gave a most interesting address in such a manner that even the smallest child could learn something. She congratulated the President, Miss Gladys Parsons, on the flourishing condition of the Band, and encouraged the live members to "carry on" in their good work.

Mr. and Mrs. R. S. Munn, who had been on a visit to Montreal, Toronto and other Canadian cities, returned by S.S. Kyle, and arrived in town by Wednesday's express of last week, having had a most enjoyable trip.

Miss Clarice Parsons, who is teaching at the Methodist Orphanage, St. John's, arrived here on Thursday last to spend Easter at home. Her sister, Miss Rita, who is teaching at Bay Roberts, came along by the same train.

Miss Kathleen Casey, who is teaching at Bishop's Falls, arrived home last week to spend the Easter vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Casey.

Miss Mary Whiteway arrived from Bay Roberts on Wednesday last and spent some days here visiting friends. Miss Whiteway is leaving by the next trip of S.S. Digby en route to Bonaventure, Mass., U.S.A., where she will make her home in future. Her brother, Edwin and sisters Mildred and Winifred, are residing there. Mary takes with her the best wishes of her many friends in the home town for much success in the U.S.A.

Dr. W. S. Goodwin and assistant, Mr. William Stevenson, are at present visiting Bonavista and vicinity, professionally.

Mr. Chas. Noseworthy, of A. E. Hickman's office staff, came here on Thursday last, and spent Easter with his parents, Capt. and Mrs. T. Noseworthy.

Miss Irene Dwyer, who is working in the city, arrived by Thursday night's train to spend Easter with her parents, Sgt. and Mrs. Dwyer, and returned to St. John's again by Monday afternoon's train.

Amongst those to spend Easter here with relatives and friends were Miss Susie Parsons and Mr. Claude Watts, of St. John's, who returned again by Monday afternoon's train.
