Formerly a great objection to any description of a two-wheeled rig was the uncomfortable horse motion, which almost drove the cart out of existence. To Mr. J. H. Moran, carriage builder, Richmond street, perhaps more than anyone else, is due the credit of having overcome this detectable motion in his now-famous "Moran carri," which is a model of beauty and comfort the case, with attaching the gearing to any kind of a bodylor wheels, but places on the market a cart combining style, durability and utility, with entire freedom from horse motion.
