The intimate connection between coal and the Cathedral of St. Paul's may not be widely known, but it is a fact that the present eathedral was practically built on coal, or, to speak more correctly, on the proceeds of the sale of coal.

The original cathedral is said to have been formed about the year 604 and to have been entirely demolished by the fire in the year 1087. The next church was built of stone obtained 1566. The steeple was not again set up, and, when the civil wars came on, the bouy of the church was used as a stable for the Horse Guards, although a weekly lecture was given by a divine in the choir.

So it stood, this great Gothic building, until the year 1666, when it was simost completely destroyed during the great fire of London.

Then Sir Christopher Wren was called upon to build a new edifice, and, although the King gave a yearly grant of £1.000 and between £00.000 and £70.000 was obtained from benevolence, this was not nearly enough to complete the great work. Lantic is a quick-acting sweetener, because it is fine. It distributes the pure cane sweetness speedily, thoroughly and economically. It saves time in the preparation of cakes, puddings and sauces, in the cooking of preserves, in the making of candy, in the sweetening of beverages, hot or cold. Not whiter are the snowy dollys and serviettes on the mahogany table than the tiny crystals of Lantic that gleam and glisten in the sugar bowl. Not finer is the silver with its hall-mark. Yet, in homes where every penny counts, Lantic goodness helps in the saving. It does go farther!
