

Political & Social Works by Charles Marvin.

"CHARLES MARVIN's political mission has been summed up by himself in one word—'To Imperialise the working man.' He says: 'The working man has the largest vote, and the welfare of the Empire is largely in his keeping.' His object in life is to create a consciousness of Empire in his mind—when this is done, the masses will insist on a strong foreign policy, and the federation of the Colonies with the Mother Country will follow as a matter of course. He does not write for any Party, but for the whole people, and he always strives to keep himself in harmony with the national sentiment."—Newcastle Examiner.
