WOMAN'S WORLD.

FRIENDSHIP. The world uncertain comes and goes,

The world uncertain comes and goes, The lover rooted stays; I fancied he was fled.
And, after many a year,
Glowed unexhausted kindliness,
Like daily sunrise there.
My careful heart was free again,
O friend, my bosom said,
Thru thee alone the sky is,
Thru thee the rose is red,
All things thru thee take nobler form,
And look beyond the earth,
The mill-round of our fate appears
A sun path in thy worth.
Me, too, thy nobleness has taught
To master my despair;
The fountains of my hidden life
Are thru thy friendship fair.

For the Well-Dressed Woman The well dressed woman this winter -that is, if she carries her wardrobe to all the nice details—will have plenty of chemisettes and cuffs. The no better way of using up the bet ter parts of worn lingerie waists of al over embroidery and lace, but where one is buying new there is nothing half so effective as the alternating strips of narrow lace and embroidery. Band cuffs, two or three inches wide made of insertion and edged with litonly are practical from washing stand-points, but are matched in separate narrow lace edged bands, which are lace collars, so that they may be taken off and washed separately. That is, in making the lace collar, which is part of the chemisette, it is carried up to a shallow depth only, and the featherbone is put in to reach up to the depth wanted. Then the little lace band, finished with a bit of val around its entire outer edge, is basted to the the lingerie is put in. It is the most popular way to bring the sleeve to a little below the elbow and then to knots of a little more elaborate embroidery, also of the contrasting color.

Shows Gowns Out of Doors.

New York is expected to become in terested in the suggestion that dress makers should display their summer frocks in a garden. One London modiste, who is called "the creator of emotional frocks," has started an out-ofdoor showroom. "Why should women more definite when he told of her virchoose their outdoor frocks in stuffy tues. showrooms?" she asks, and goes on o say that garden party and Ascot gowns community, and keeps a highly respect-should really be exhibited on a lawn, able house. On fair days, however, it so that customers may be able to judge has been the custom for rough custom of their harmony with the sky, grass ers for twenty-five miles around to and trees. If dressmakers across the Atlantic take to doing such ingenious things, invention in America will have to bestir itself and exhibit silk waterproof coats in artificial rainstorms, with artificial thunder and lightning to make the scene realistic. Then a snowstorm may not come amiss by and the licensed victualers generally may find a suggestion here worth discussion. by for heavier garments.
