THE WORLD SERIES ROUND-UP.

We realize the fact that a baseball proposition developed on copy doesn't necessarily work out on the ball field.

You might prove or show on copy paper that two plus two equals four. But you might prove or show on copy paper that two plus two might equal to the uncertainties of field action, two plus two might equal to the uncertainties of field action, two plus two might equal to the uncertainties of field action, two plus two might equal to the uncertainties of field action.

But in the main, figures plus the dope have a way of working out in proper The club picked by the figures and the majority of experts to win generally so the purpose of this serial narrative is to offer an dvance opinion on the matter of the New York Giants and the Chicago White Sox, who are being primed to meet head-on in one of the greatest world series collisions of recent

BURNS VS. JACKSON.

There was a day when Joe Jackson's place was up with Cobb and Speaker. Then it was Ty, Tris and Joe.

But that day belonged to the era when Jackson was batting around .380. At the outfielding art alone he was merely fair.

George Burns, of the Giants, on the opposite bank, while never a massive defensive work has been always brilliant, for in addition to a wide range back and forward, he had the knack of starting quickly and arriving on time. And and forward, he had the knack of starting quickly and arriving on time. And very few have had a finer arm for service. But Burns this season has even passed Jackson in offensive strength. He has made more hits, scored more runs and stolen three times as many bases.

passed Jackson in offensive strength, He has made more and stolen three times as many bases.

On the season's complete returns Burns has undoubtedly done the better work, both at bat and in the field.

Jackson's slugging value at bat is not to be understimated. He is always a dangerous citizen with the big mace poised for action. But he is up against a rival who can easily outfield him and who all the year has been just a trifle

The decision goes to Burns.

KAUFF VS. FELSCH.

On the figures alone Benny Kauff, the Glant centre fielder, and Hap Felsch, who operates the same department for the White Sox, would be ranked as closely together as John W. Nip and Henry V. Tuck, the well-known fifty-fifties. Kauff is a fast, hard hitting outfielder, always aggressive and on the job, a greatly improved player over last year.

But in Felsch he is up against one of the leading stars of the American League, another fast, sure outfielder who can hit and who is always highly dangerous in a pinch.

This Kauff-Felsch clash should be one of the most interesting duels of the coming carnival. But while Kauff is very good, Felsch is a trifle steadler in the outfield, just as brilliant, and a trifle more dangerous at bat.

In the American League he ranks third to Cobb and Speaker, who run 1-2. He has been a great run-making factor all the year, and no one south side star has contributed more to the cause.

has been a great run-making factor all the year, and no one south side star has contributed more to the cause.

Kauff is also a long distance hitter, but between the two we feel that Chlcago has the shade with Felsch.

ROBERTSON VS. LIEBOLD.

In right field the Giants will offer Dave Robertson against Nemo Liebold, who with Shano Collins has done most of the work. Neither ball club is as who with Shano Collins has done most of the work. Neither ball club is as strongly intrenched in right field as it happens to be in the other two sections.

Last season Dave Robertson gave every evidence of being a Mr. Cobb. Uptrough July he batted over .350. Then he began to fade out and has never been near .300 since. n near .suu since. Robertson is a spectacular outfielder with fine speed and a great arm. But he is none too steady and is erratic in handling ground balls. He isn't as consistent a fielder as Liebold is, but more sensational. His superiority over Liebold at bat is pronounced. He has not only made more hits, but for longer distances.

Liebold is a .240 batsman, who will be near that mark in the coming series.

Robertson may bat .340 or .119. He is none too good against left-handers, but again a hight-hander is likely to peel the cover off the ball at any given As one or two long blows may turn a world series upside down, Robertson undoubtedly carries greater value for a six or seven-game affair. He has the

Via the figures and the dope, the Giants in Burns, Kauff and Robertson have a slightly stronger outfield than the White Sox have in Jackson, Felsch

The Sox have two dangerous hatsmen. The Giants have three. The three Giants combined are stronger in attack and no weaker in a defensive way.

The two outfields are among the best who have met in any world series clash. Neither is as good as the Red Sox combination of 1912, with Speaker,

But no two outfields since have presented more high-class talent. And when the final returns are in it isn't probable that any part of the defeat can be charged to weakness upon either club in the general outfield play.

The world's record for effective pitching is held by a lefthander who looks like a prep school kid and acts like a seasoned vetergn in the pincipes. He has one of the best fast balls that ever busted over the plate, superbountor, which it took three years to acquire, and a record of allowing only 90 earned runs in 140 innings of big league pitching.

His name is Schupp.

He was a big factor in winning the pennant for the Giants this year and a great aid in their world's record of 26 straight wins. If past performances or dope indicate anything at all,, this nervy sensational lefthander of McGraw's ought to make World's Series history when the Giants and White Sox tear into each other in the Big Scrap.

Schupp is a good example of what persistency will do for a player. Up to two vears ago his big fault was wild-

Thirteen years ago an undersized twenty-year-old kid pitched his first game of professional ball for Calumet, Mich. He had unlimited nerve a bushile eague wind-up and a freak delivery. He copped this first start, aniowing six hits and fanning eleven batters.

This youngster was Eddie Clootte and the freak delivery was the afterward famous knuckle-ball.

Today, thirteen years later, this same righthander is the most discussed twirter in the game. He is still using a freak delivery but the scribes and bugs call it the "shine" ball and the "sallor. Eddie is the ace of the Chicago White Sox hurling staff and the hope of the south side fans on the brink of what promises to be the most hectic world's series ever staged.

There is little in the line of baseball achievement that Evers can wish for. For many years he was regarded as the greatest second baseman in the game. Now Evers wants to retire from baseball as the oldest player in point of service in the major leagues.

This spring, when the retirement of Honus Wagner was announced, he thought he had realized his ambition, for Wagner is the only man in baseball who has been "up there" longer than Pepper John.

Then Wagner came back. Right now he is playing great baseball and it will be surprising if he is not in the game next year.

be surprising if he is not in the game next year.

Johnny, in the meanwhile, is going back. Illness and his fiery, nervous make-up have combined to undermine his constitution. That he will finish this season is not to be doubted, but whether he will be able to weather another stormy year is questionable.

This year he has not been able to play regularly. His recent transfer to Philadelphia may lengthen his days in the game, for he will be able to get along with easy-going Pat Moran, while every day was a tempest with the guick-tempered George Stallings at the helm.

Sunday night when an oil stove exploded.

Mrs. Mooney was washing her daughter's head, using coal oil in the water, according to members of the family, when some of the oil spilled near the stove. Immediately the girl, who was seated near the stove, was enveloped in flames, which spread to the clothing of Mrs. Mooney. Both ran into the yard, after a younger daughter had attempted to extinguish the flames by throwing water on them. Their cries attracted the husband, who wrapped them in wet blankets. They received medical attention, but both were so badly burned that recovery was impossible. Small Arms Turn Scale.

The battle of the Menin road—one of the greatest British successes of the war—in which the rifle and bayonet figured so largely, is a marked demonstration of the wisdom of this policy. In these days it is minor tactics that success depends upon to a great extent. It is small arms—after the artillery has done its work—that turn the scale. It may be a hard thing for many to contemplate, but this war is being won by killing men, and the rifle and steel are accomplishing this. "Kill" is the word that every soldier must learn and heed. Often it is that Tommy does not like this business of killing.
