Fairville League.
The game between the Roses and Portlands last evening went six innings and was a runaway for the latter team with a score of twelve while only two runs were made by the home nine. While the score appears high, the game was a close one until the last two sessions. The batteries worked hard and with effect. Nobles having twelve strike-outs to his credit. The fielding was, on the whole, quite snappy, and it looked like either team's chances of winning were close one until the last two sessions. The Portlands found Nobles and managed to pile up six scores. Nobles retired in favor of Arch Ferris, but the blood of the North End men was up and they pounded the sphere some more, until the grand total of a round dozen scores was recorded.

Fanjoy and Sharkey were the battery for the winners and played a steady, consistent game throughout.
The previous licking administered to the Portlands by the Courtneys mislead some of the fans to doubt the ability of the North End boys to perform, but they showed strength last night.
As usual the game was entirely free from any kind of friction and a huge crowd attended. The line-up of both aggregations was practically the same as published before. Tonight the Royals and victory-bushed Courtneys are scheduled for combat.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 1.—Freddie Welsh, lightweight champion, refused to meet Jimmy Duffy here for their scheduled ten-round fight, when the Lockport boy weighed in three pounds overweight. The fight was to have been at 135 pounds ringside. The Broadway Auditorium was crowded to overflowing, about $2,000 worth of tickets being present. The ticket money was refunded. "I signed the articles, and I was willing to live up to them," said Welsh. "There is no sense of my making anything with a fellow who deliberately violates his agreement."

TRIAL REVEALS
ROMANCE OF WARGerman Governor Arrested as Spy
While Seeking Lover, a British
Officer, in France

Paris, May 10.—The story of a German woman's love for a British officer, and how she sacrificed liberty in order to see him has been revealed before a court-martial here.

Faulstich Susan Pommerech, aged thirty-six, a governess, born at Dresden, appeared to answer a charge of being in the possession of false identification papers. The judges found her guilty on one count only, and sentenced her to four months' imprisonment, the exact period she has already been detained, but she must leave France and not return for ten years.

After the outbreak of war Miss Pommerech asked for a week's holiday, saying she was going to London, but instead of doing so she went to Havre and then to Rouen in search of her old sweetheart.

Unsuccessful in her quest, she went to Switzerland, and in the meantime her employers received an anonymous telegram accusing her of espionage. The police were informed and she was arrested.

The principal evidence against her was a letter to the prisoner from a German officer, written since the beginning of the war, asking her to go to Fribourg and give further information concerning "B." all expenses would be paid said the German, who gave details of how the reply was to be sent to disarm suspicion.

There was a dramatic scene in court when she told her story about the British officer.

"I loved him," she said simply. "I love him now. I shall always love him. It is as if an Englishwoman I look upon England as my country. I hate Germany." As she said this she struck the rail with her clenched fist.

"I went to Rouen and Havre to try to find Captain —, I could not bear to think that he might be killed at the war and I would never see him again."

"I would rather be a spy for France in Germany, than be a German spy in France."

Maitre Philippe addressed the court for the defence. Taking the evidence as one would take a bundle of sticks, he broke it piece by piece.

At the beginning of the trial the crowd in the court room were awayed by the report read by the prosecuting counsel, and their voices rose like the hissing of an angry sea.

After Maitre Philippe had spoken and the court retired to consider its verdict no one doubted what that would be. It was the lightest possible.

Miss Pommerech has been removed to a concentration camp, but there is no more question of punishment for her.
