BUSINESS AND FINANCIAL REVIEW OF THE WEEK

(Toronto Globe, Saturday.) Autumn is being looked forward to by both bankers and business men with considerable eagerness in the hope that it will bring the long-looked-for revival in trade. This is the paramount question at the present time, and, generally speaking, everybody's opinion centres on September as the month that will be the turning point. Some little anxiety, however, tempers the hopeful expectations, and the resultant question is whether the awaited improvement will mean the beginning of the end of the depression which has so long prevailed. Here and there are apparent signs of improving conditions, but these are not yet sufficient to permit of saying that a continuation of the caution which has been apparent for so long. As is usual in this time of year, practically everything hinges on the outcome of the crops, and all expectations now are to the effect that the year will be better than average crop, and that the export demand for our wheat will be good.

The situation in Canada will undoubtedly be brightened with an improved business in European countries, and taking all in all, a more optimistic note was apparent this week in the world of business.

Little Outward Change.

Little outward change was apparent in the Canadian business and financial situation. Possibly the outstanding factor was the improved trend apparent in the general securities market. Prices showed an upward tendency early in the week, and this movement continued until the close. The change for the better set in immediately following the civic holiday recess, and it was readily apparent that idle money is now being turned into investment stocks. Such stocks as Steel of Canada preferred, Tuckers preferred, Consumers' Gas and Steamships preferred were in quite noticeable demand. The investing public has shown an apathetic attitude for the past couple of months, but the present change seems to be distinctly for the better. Bids were in evidence for nearly all the securities on the market, and the transactions were also outstanding as a result of a strong inquiry.

A slight improvement was also seen in the market for bonds, and this is expected to continue. The good demand for the better bonds and the upward tendency of prices are considered two of the best signs of an early return to normal conditions. A similar change for the better was also in evidence on the mining market, and mining in the North Country is active, with the larger mines working at full capacity.

Crop Conditions Favorable.

As regards the western crop, the favorable conditions in evidence a week ago are continuing. Ideal filling weather is being experienced, and the cool nights are not conducive to the further spread of rust. Prospects based on acreage shown, and allowing for damage from drought, black rust, hail, etc., would go to indicate an estimated wheat yield exceeding that of last year. A conservative preliminary estimate of the western wheat crop is given as around 220,000,000 bushels. The yield of coarse grains will, it is expected, show a decrease as compared with last year, on account of the smaller acreage and drought conditions. The hay crop will
