

Rival Lovers Had Furious Conflict

Vanquished Dying from 15 Stab Wounds — Victor Fought Police With Axe.

New York, Oct. 16.—Withstanding the repeated pleas of an infuriated man who sought to fight them off with an axe, two Jersey City policemen early this morning finally beat down their assailant with nightsticks, and hauled him away to a room at 44 Williams avenue, where the axe-wielder had stabbed his rival in a love affair fifteen times in the face and body.

When the brawlers tried to enter the narrow hallway at the house they found their way barred by Michael Parlovich, thirty years old, Cyprian, who, he struck at them with an axe. A pitched battle ensued in the hall, which prevented the policemen from using their revolvers because of danger to each other. After dodging several blows from the axe, one of the policemen managed to strike the enraged man with his nightstick.

The affray in the boarding house was said to have been caused by jealousy over a girl. Early this morning, George Colack, 28 years old, of 46 Yale avenue, Jersey City, and a companion, Steve Sapo, of the same address, made their way to Parlovich's room at the Williams street address. Colack and Parlovich, it was said, have both gone with the same girl for some time and mutual threats have passed between them.

As a result of the visit, Colack is in a Jersey City hospital, where it is said he will die. Parlovich is under arrest charged with atrocious assault and battery, and Sapo is suffering with a bruised head for his effort to prevent trouble between the two lovers.

Parlovich was said to have attacked Colack with a knife, stabbing him repeatedly. Fifteen wounds, some of them serious, were counted on the victim's body.

According to an account of the stabbing given by the police by Sapo, Colack ordered Parlovich to keep away from the girl. Sapo, who was said to have tried to prevent trouble and tried to wrest the knife from Parlovich's hand. He was thrown to the floor and escaped from the room to notify the police.

League Ends Dispute In Industrial Silesia

Will be Single Economic Union for Fifteen Years.

Buenos Aires, Oct. 16.—The industrial region of Upper Silesia will be maintained as a single industrial and economic union for fifteen years under the solution of the Upper Silesia dispute reached by the council of the League of Nations, of which the Geneva conference of last December says he has authoritatively learned the substance. The industrial region would be administered during this period by an international commission without political competence.

The territory, in dispute politically, however, would be divided into two zones under Polish and German sovereignty respectively, and while delimitation of the frontiers is not yet completed, it would be more favorable to Poland than the more favorable to Germany proposed by Great Britain, closely following the plebiscite line, with Butzen assigned to Poland.

The British and French Governments are said to have approved the project, though Italy made some reservations.

Drugs Excite Your Kidneys, Use Salts

If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers, Drink Lots of Water.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared, and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that irritate the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract.

Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they clean from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drinks lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in uric acid, so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder troubles.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot be made a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Write for free literature to: J. C. Gregory, Ltd., 225 Sydney St., Phone M. 1704.

Large Number of Photographs of Business Men

Received their training at the Business College is his best friend.

For new Catalogue showing the men think of us.

S. KERR, Principal.

U.S. NAVY RUSHES PLANS IN FACE OF ARMS PARLEY

Additional Money for Aircraft Carriers Will be Asked of Congress.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 16.—The Navy Department plans to ask Congress immediately for additional appropriations to build aircraft carriers for the Navy and will go ahead with its building programme regardless of the arms conference.

Official announcement to this effect was made today by Secretary Denby to the House Naval Affairs Committee. The department sees that decisions by the conference cannot be anticipated, and realizes that the Navy is lacking in certain elements of a well rounded fleet.

The Secretary's statement is an answer to those who expect the conference to "disarm," and says that the best that can be expected of it for armament is a limitation which will lessen economic burdens and eliminate the danger of competitive building among nations.

In regard to ships provided for most of which are in a fair way of completion—the speed of construction has been greatly lessened by diminished appropriations. The department is going ahead as fast as it can with its limited funds. The work of construction is being distributed among the vessels now under way.

The decision to go ahead with building, it is explained, does not express lack of confidence in the accomplishment of the arms conference. It merely demonstrates that the conference is not a disarmament meeting.

Information received here from other countries, notably Great Britain and Japan, shows that these countries are completing construction under way, and in some instances authorizing new construction. Neither those countries nor the United States proposes to lead in limiting armaments until all are agreed on the proportion of arms to be stocked.

So far as the American Navy is concerned, Mr. Denby said it plain that the building of aircraft carriers is regarded as essential. This conference is the result of the recent bombing tests, which demonstrated the new effectiveness which the airplane is acquiring in naval strategy.

The navy has not changed its belief that the capital ship remains the basic unit of the fleet. Naval officials believe there has been much misconception on the views of the Navy General Board, owing to the debate proposed over the relative merits of the capital ship and aircraft.

Naval officials guiding the construction programme think the coming tests have demonstrated the possibilities of aircraft. No one has been quicker to recognize this than the naval group which retains its faith in the capital ship. It is their belief that future naval operations will be carried on with a large complement of aircraft for bombing and for long distance gun-fire.

The navy is daily developing new possibilities in long range guns and sees the time when navies will fire at each other over the horizon, making airplanes necessary for range finding. Airplane construction has not reached the point where the heavier than air craft can operate from their base and carriers are essential to transport them with the fleet. Experiments are being made also to have each warship carry its own complement of aircraft. With the exception of the converted aircraft carrier Langley, the American Navy is not equipped with carriers.

The determination to go ahead with construction has in mind in part the essential weakness of the navy shortage of light, fast cruisers. Any limitation of armaments at this time would find the American navy lacking in this important requisite.

Stabilizer For Airplanes Tested

Pilot Flew Paris-Amsterdam Route Without Touching Controlling Lever.

Paris, Oct. 16.—Georges Artyne, an engineer, has invented a stabilizer for airplanes which, it is claimed, will make it possible for the pilot to leave the post while the machine continues flying automatically.

The appliances have been tested by the Messageries Aériennes Compagny with success. It is said, on the Paris-Amsterdam line on a large passenger-carrying machine. The machine flew the whole route without the pilot, it is reported, once touching the lever.

Great importance is attached to the result by French aviation experts. It is declared that it will aid enormously to commercial flying. In a fog or thick clouds the appliance, it is claimed, assures the airplane keeping the correct course. At night small electric lights reveal any deviation immediately.

In bad weather and storms the invention will also be of great assistance, it is said, in relieving the pilot of much strain. The appliance does not interfere with the ordinary steering gear and weighs only eighty-eight pounds.

Magistrate Francis X. McQuaid's young son is permitted to wear the uniform of the Giants, probably because his father is one of the owners. The boy must have mized up his wardrobe, for he appeared in the white suit of the home team, a role played for the third time by the Yankees.

The feminine element soon learned pick out some of the favorites. When Emil (Irish) Muesel strolled across to the Giants' dugout after he had knocked a home run into the grandstand hundreds of women applauded. "Irish" acknowledged the attention by lifting his cap. One woman tossed a bunch of chrysanthemums in his direction.

Babe Ruth, who was out of the game for the first time, and who was photographed in his cile, a costume including a brown suit and tan cap, may find the attention of the feminine hero worshippers being transferred to Foster, who made a home run and scored the man ahead of him. He did just what everybody had expected Ruth to do. Ruth watched the play from a bleachers, and a patriotic effect in the grandstand due to the red hats of the women and the red caps of the ushers, the blue hatted fans and the white caps and socks of the boys who

THE U. F. MONKEY AND THE NUTS

Will the cat permit its paw to be thus used? (By courtesy of Montreal Star)

Wives of Players Engrossed In Game

Except the Steady Mrs. Ruth, Most of Them Are Slender and Nervous.

Looking over that solid bowl of humanity at the Polo Grounds, New York, when the Giants and the Yankees met for their sixth battle of the series, the animated specks seemed at first glance to be mostly males of the species. A closer study, however, revealed the fact that a greater number of women than usual was scattered throughout the grandstand and the bleachers, and one could pick out the wives of several of the baseball stars.

The better halves of these players, speaking generally, are a contrast to the better halves of the men in gray flannel or white channel suits, representing the visiting and the home teams. The women are small, slim and suggest a nervous temperament, and a pronounced exception is, of course, Mrs. Babe Ruth, who is plump, not very fat and who looks as if it would take a lot to ruffle her.

It is hard to tell whether if you were the wife of a baseball player, it would be more nerve racking to stay at home and wait for the score or to see the game and have your feelings torn to shreds by a defeat, if it happened to go that way.

Mrs. McNally, wife of the Yankee's third baseman, was noticed in a third grandstand. She is short and slender, wearing a dark dress with a close fitting feather fringed black hat. Mrs. Roger Peckinpaugh, whose husband is captain and shortstop for the American League team, beamed cheerily at the start of the game, but this expression gave way to one of deep gravity later when the clients began to score in the fourth inning a score of 7 to 5. Mrs. Peckinpaugh were a one piece dress of dark brown and a wing trimmed hat to match.

Another Yankee wife, wearing the game was Mrs. Walter Pipp, who kept her eyes riveted on first base when the home team had the field. Mrs. "Red" Casey is another slender wife who sat through the game. She had on a dark suit with fur and a black satin belt trimmed with jet. Can't be a pitcher for the Giants, but she is a pitcher for the bench. Mrs. "Eh" Sallee, whose husband also is a reserve pitcher for the National League, was on hand to see the big fight. Her dark cloth dress was graced with jet and she wore a chic dark turban.

Somebody arrived at the Brush Stadium in a red kiddie car and parked it under a grandstand.

Magistrate Francis X. McQuaid's young son is permitted to wear the uniform of the Giants, probably because his father is one of the owners. The boy must have mized up his wardrobe, for he appeared in the white suit of the home team, a role played for the third time by the Yankees.

The feminine element soon learned pick out some of the favorites. When Emil (Irish) Muesel strolled across to the Giants' dugout after he had knocked a home run into the grandstand hundreds of women applauded. "Irish" acknowledged the attention by lifting his cap. One woman tossed a bunch of chrysanthemums in his direction.

Babe Ruth, who was out of the game for the first time, and who was photographed in his cile, a costume including a brown suit and tan cap, may find the attention of the feminine hero worshippers being transferred to Foster, who made a home run and scored the man ahead of him. He did just what everybody had expected Ruth to do. Ruth watched the play from a bleachers, and a patriotic effect in the grandstand due to the red hats of the women and the red caps of the ushers, the blue hatted fans and the white caps and socks of the boys who sell ice cream cones. Both teams have remarked the colorful scene.

Wives of Players Engrossed In Game

Except the Steady Mrs. Ruth, Most of Them Are Slender and Nervous.

Looking over that solid bowl of humanity at the Polo Grounds, New York, when the Giants and the Yankees met for their sixth battle of the series, the animated specks seemed at first glance to be mostly males of the species. A closer study, however, revealed the fact that a greater number of women than usual was scattered throughout the grandstand and the bleachers, and one could pick out the wives of several of the baseball stars.

The better halves of these players, speaking generally, are a contrast to the better halves of the men in gray flannel or white channel suits, representing the visiting and the home teams. The women are small, slim and suggest a nervous temperament, and a pronounced exception is, of course, Mrs. Babe Ruth, who is plump, not very fat and who looks as if it would take a lot to ruffle her.

It is hard to tell whether if you were the wife of a baseball player, it would be more nerve racking to stay at home and wait for the score or to see the game and have your feelings torn to shreds by a defeat, if it happened to go that way.

Mrs. McNally, wife of the Yankee's third baseman, was noticed in a third grandstand. She is short and slender, wearing a dark dress with a close fitting feather fringed black hat. Mrs. Roger Peckinpaugh, whose husband is captain and shortstop for the American League team, beamed cheerily at the start of the game, but this expression gave way to one of deep gravity later when the clients began to score in the fourth inning a score of 7 to 5. Mrs. Peckinpaugh were a one piece dress of dark brown and a wing trimmed hat to match.

Another Yankee wife, wearing the game was Mrs. Walter Pipp, who kept her eyes riveted on first base when the home team had the field. Mrs. "Red" Casey is another slender wife who sat through the game. She had on a dark suit with fur and a black satin belt trimmed with jet. Can't be a pitcher for the Giants, but she is a pitcher for the bench. Mrs. "Eh" Sallee, whose husband also is a reserve pitcher for the National League, was on hand to see the big fight. Her dark cloth dress was graced with jet and she wore a chic dark turban.

Somebody arrived at the Brush Stadium in a red kiddie car and parked it under a grandstand.

Magistrate Francis X. McQuaid's young son is permitted to wear the uniform of the Giants, probably because his father is one of the owners. The boy must have mized up his wardrobe, for he appeared in the white suit of the home team, a role played for the third time by the Yankees.

Plans To Entertain Marshal Foch In U. S.

French Commander and Party Expected to Arrive October 29.

Washington, Oct. 16.—Final arrangements for the reception and entertainment of Marshal Foch on his forthcoming visit to the United States for the American Legion convention and the limitation of armament conference were made public here today by Alton T. Roberts, chairman of the Legion reception committee, who is to have charge of the noted Frenchman's tour.

The Marshal will arrive in New York October 29 aboard the liner Paris. Included in his party will be Gen. Delestre, chief of staff; Major Marry and Capt. L'hopital, his personal aid, and Dr. Andre, his personal physician. Gen. Pershing and Brig-Gen. Conner, designated as the Marshal's military aid during his visit, and a legion committee will travel with the party.

Other distinguished figures who will come for the legion meeting, according to Mr. Roberts, are: Lord Beatty, Admiral of the British fleet; Armando Diaz, Generalissimo of the Italian army; Gen. Baron Joffre, commander in chief of the Belgian army; and Charles W. Betrand of the French Chamber of Deputies, who is head of the International Veteran Organization, including the American Legion.

The Marshal will be tendered a reception in New York after which he will leave for Washington, where he will make a formal call on President Harding. Accompanied by Gen. Pershing and the representatives of the armies and navies of the Allied Powers, the Marshal will leave for Kansas City, October 30, where he will appear before the American Legion on November 1. During his visit in Kansas City, Marshal Foch will dedicate the new Kansas City war memorial, review a parade of legion men and be tendered an official banquet by Messrs. and Kansas City officials.

Marshal Foch will visit St. Louis November 3, where he will appear before the American Legion on November 4. Chicago November 5, and Detroit November 7. On the way to Detroit, the Marshal will stop at Camp Custer to dedicate the morning of Armistice Day to participate in the ceremonies for America's unknown dead at Arlington.

Paris, Oct. 16.—Georges Artyne, an engineer, has invented a stabilizer for airplanes which, it is claimed, will make it possible for the pilot to leave the post while the machine continues flying automatically.

The appliances have been tested by the Messageries Aériennes Compagny with success. It is said, on the Paris-Amsterdam line on a large passenger-carrying machine. The machine flew the whole route without the pilot, it is reported, once touching the lever.

Great importance is attached to the result by French aviation experts. It is declared that it will aid enormously to commercial flying. In a fog or thick clouds the appliance, it is claimed, assures the airplane keeping the correct course. At night small electric lights reveal any deviation immediately.

In bad weather and storms the invention will also be of great assistance, it is said, in relieving the pilot of much strain. The appliance does not interfere with the ordinary steering gear and weighs only eighty-eight pounds.

Magistrate Francis X. McQuaid's young son is permitted to wear the uniform of the Giants, probably because his father is one of the owners. The boy must have mized up his wardrobe, for he appeared in the white suit of the home team, a role played for the third time by the Yankees.

The feminine element soon learned pick out some of the favorites. When Emil (Irish) Muesel strolled across to the Giants' dugout after he had knocked a home run into the grandstand hundreds of women applauded. "Irish" acknowledged the attention by lifting his cap. One woman tossed a bunch of chrysanthemums in his direction.

Babe Ruth, who was out of the game for the first time, and who was photographed in his cile, a costume including a brown suit and tan cap, may find the attention of the feminine hero worshippers being transferred to Foster, who made a home run and scored the man ahead of him. He did just what everybody had expected Ruth to do. Ruth watched the play from a bleachers, and a patriotic effect in the grandstand due to the red hats of the women and the red caps of the ushers, the blue hatted fans and the white caps and socks of the boys who sell ice cream cones. Both teams have remarked the colorful scene.

Wives of Players Engrossed In Game

Except the Steady Mrs. Ruth, Most of Them Are Slender and Nervous.

Looking over that solid bowl of humanity at the Polo Grounds, New York, when the Giants and the Yankees met for their sixth battle of the series, the animated specks seemed at first glance to be mostly males of the species. A closer study, however, revealed the fact that a greater number of women than usual was scattered throughout the grandstand and the bleachers, and one could pick out the wives of several of the baseball stars.

The better halves of these players, speaking generally, are a contrast to the better halves of the men in gray flannel or white channel suits, representing the visiting and the home teams. The women are small, slim and suggest a nervous temperament, and a pronounced exception is, of course, Mrs. Babe Ruth, who is plump, not very fat and who looks as if it would take a lot to ruffle her.

It is hard to tell whether if you were the wife of a baseball player, it would be more nerve racking to stay at home and wait for the score or to see the game and have your feelings torn to shreds by a defeat, if it happened to go that way.

Mrs. McNally, wife of the Yankee's third baseman, was noticed in a third grandstand. She is short and slender, wearing a dark dress with a close fitting feather fringed black hat. Mrs. Roger Peckinpaugh, whose husband is captain and shortstop for the American League team, beamed cheerily at the start of the game, but this expression gave way to one of deep gravity later when the clients began to score in the fourth inning a score of 7 to 5. Mrs. Peckinpaugh were a one piece dress of dark brown and a wing trimmed hat to match.

Refuses To Leave His Work Shop

Italian Heir to Thirty Million Lire Becomes Exceedingly Popular.

Milan, Oct. 12.—The heir of thirty million lire, a carpenter, Giacomo Lazardi, of Bologna, who receives the huge sum through the death of his brother in America, continues at work in his humble shop, above which is his living room. Every day postmen bring him bundles of letters and people call in motor cars to place themselves and their homes at his disposal. He has been offered a nobleman's palace for purchase and bankers without number have been offering to invest his money.

Though only 39 years old, Lazardi says he would rather live on in his shop. He is used to the life there, and he does not know the way of palaces. His present intention is to continue to carve out happiness at his work bench as in former times.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

This morning his mother sent him to the pond to empty a pail. The boy set the pail down on the bank and divided in. Mrs. Lewis, being suspicious, followed and found him head down in the mud in four feet of water.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

This morning his mother sent him to the pond to empty a pail. The boy set the pail down on the bank and divided in. Mrs. Lewis, being suspicious, followed and found him head down in the mud in four feet of water.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

This morning his mother sent him to the pond to empty a pail. The boy set the pail down on the bank and divided in. Mrs. Lewis, being suspicious, followed and found him head down in the mud in four feet of water.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

This morning his mother sent him to the pond to empty a pail. The boy set the pail down on the bank and divided in. Mrs. Lewis, being suspicious, followed and found him head down in the mud in four feet of water.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

This morning his mother sent him to the pond to empty a pail. The boy set the pail down on the bank and divided in. Mrs. Lewis, being suspicious, followed and found him head down in the mud in four feet of water.

London, Oct. 16.—Another and more determined attempt by American dealers to capture the art treasures of the country is expected when the season opens at the end of next month.

"Last season was a very bad time for London dealers," said a member of a large art-buying house, but plenty of American buyers have been over seas the child until he ran away. Brought back against his will, he ran away again, only to be found a second time. He has been despondent and said he would rather be dead than as he was.

Nellie McClung Speaks In London

Healing of Hatred Her Topic Calls on Women to Save the World.

London, Oct. 12.—"If women cannot suggest some plan for the salvation of the world, then we are lost," said Mrs. Nellie McClung, speaking on the "Healing of Hatred" before the Women's Guild of Empire.

Lady MacLaren Brown occupied the chair, and there was a large and distinguished audience to hear the Canadian woman who is today one of the most talked about women in London.

"The world for some reason or other has left the track and gone into the ditch," she said, "but hopes are fixed upon the new assistant manager of the company to prevent future accidents, namely woman, who by her nature and constitution and temperament is primarily a Safety First advocate. Women are the last reserves of civilization. We cannot call down the angels."

Continuing, Mrs. McClung said that in spite of the crises there was enough of everything in the world to go round, but distribution is bad. In some places there is grain in abundance, and in others people are starving for lack of it. There must be some way out of such troubles, so she said, and women must face this gigantic task. She declared that the Women's Guild of Empire was doing excellent work by teaching fundamental economics, which was the first step in the establishment of peace in the world, and by healing hatred.

"Every soul that lives craves for self-expression and expansion," she said, "and there is a power of healing in the great tracts of open free land in which the congested population of the Old World cities may expand. In those tracts there is freedom, hope, ambition, self-respect, and all things that make for the best manhood and womanhood."

London, Oct. 12.—"If women cannot suggest some plan for the salvation of the world, then we are lost," said Mrs. Nellie McClung, speaking on the "Healing of Hatred" before the Women's Guild of Empire.

Lady MacLaren Brown occupied the chair, and there was a large and distinguished audience to hear the Canadian woman who is today one of the most talked about women in London.

"The world for some reason or other has left the track and gone into the ditch," she said, "but hopes are fixed upon the new assistant manager of the company to prevent future accidents, namely woman, who by her nature and constitution and temperament is primarily a Safety First advocate. Women are the last reserves of civilization. We cannot call down the angels."

Continuing, Mrs. McClung said that in spite of the crises there was enough of everything in the world to go round, but distribution is bad. In some places there is grain in abundance, and in others people are starving for lack of it. There must be some way out of such troubles, so she said, and women must face this gigantic task. She declared that the Women's Guild of Empire was doing excellent work by teaching fundamental economics, which was the first step in the establishment of peace in the world, and by healing hatred.

"Every soul that lives craves for self-expression and expansion," she said, "and there is a power of healing in the great tracts of open free land in which the congested population of the Old World cities may expand. In those tracts there is freedom, hope, ambition, self-respect, and all things that make for the best manhood and womanhood."

London, Oct. 12.—"If women cannot suggest some plan for the salvation of the world, then we are lost," said Mrs. Nellie McClung, speaking on the "Healing of Hatred" before the Women's Guild of Empire.

Lady MacLaren Brown occupied the chair, and there was a large and distinguished audience to hear the Canadian woman who is today one of the most talked about women in London.

"The world for some reason or other has left the track and gone into the ditch," she said, "but hopes are fixed upon the new assistant manager of the company to prevent future accidents, namely woman, who by her nature and constitution and temperament is primarily a Safety First advocate. Women are the last reserves of civilization. We cannot call down the angels."

Continuing, Mrs. McClung said that in spite of the crises there was enough of everything in the world to go round, but distribution is bad. In some places there is grain in abundance, and in others people are starving for lack of it. There must be some way out of such troubles, so she said, and women must face this gigantic task. She declared that the Women's Guild of Empire was doing excellent work by teaching fundamental economics, which was the first step in the establishment of peace in the world, and by healing hatred.

"Every soul that lives craves for self-expression and expansion," she said, "and there is a power of healing in the great tracts of open free land in which the congested population of the Old World cities may expand. In those tracts there is freedom, hope, ambition, self-respect, and all things that make for the best manhood and womanhood."

London, Oct. 12.—"If women cannot suggest some plan for the salvation of the world, then we are lost," said Mrs. Nellie McClung, speaking on the "Healing of Hatred" before the Women's Guild of Empire.

Lady MacLaren Brown occupied the chair, and there was a large and distinguished audience to hear the Canadian woman who is today one of the most talked about women in London.

"The world for some reason or other has left the track and gone into the ditch," she said, "but hopes are fixed upon the new assistant manager of the company to prevent future accidents, namely woman, who by her nature and constitution and temperament is primarily a Safety First advocate. Women are the last reserves of civilization. We cannot call down the angels."

Continuing, Mrs. McClung said that in spite of the crises there was enough of everything in the world to go round, but distribution is bad. In some places there is grain in abundance, and in others people are starving for lack of it. There must be some way out of such troubles, so she said, and women must face this gigantic task. She declared that the Women's Guild of Empire was doing excellent work by teaching fundamental economics, which was the first step in the establishment of peace in the world, and by healing hatred.

"Every soul that lives craves for self-expression and expansion," she said, "and there is a power of healing in the great tracts of open free land in which the congested population of the Old World cities may expand. In those tracts there is freedom, hope, ambition, self-respect, and all things that make for the best manhood