LETTER E-712

Ottawa, November 15, 1952

CONFIDENTIAL

AGREEMENT ON COMMERCIAL RELATIONS BETWEEN CANADA AND JAPAN

I attach for your information a copy of a draft agreement on commercial relations between Japan and Canada which the Japanese Ambassador left with me on November 13.[†] In presenting this draft the Ambassador explained that it was intended to be used as a basis of negotiation between the Japanese and Canadian representatives and that it was based substantially on the provisions included in some of our post-World War II commercial agreements with Latin American countries. In reply to my question whether the draft covered valuations for duty purposes the Japanese Ambassador suggested that this aspect of the question might appropriately form the subject of a separate exchange of notes.

2. Mr. Inagaki of the Japanese Embassy subsequently called on the Department on November 14 to shed some further light on the source material on which the Japanese authorities had drawn in the preparation of the draft
