

the second married H. E. Marshall, of Baltimore, and the youngest Professor Graves, of Evanston, Illinois. He was a member of the Church of England, and belonged to the Masonic craft, being initiated into its mysteries while residing in the West Indies. Mr. Corbett was lieutenant of the 1st Frontenac regiment, his commission dating 1836, and took an active interest in military matters. He was a large spirited gentleman, courteous, kindly and honourable in all his dealings, and left no feeling but one of universal regret when he passed away. William Henry Corbett, twin brother of Richard, went to the West Indies in his youth, became a prominent planter and merchant, and died in Georgetown, Demarara, on the 1st March, 1866. Ellen Isabella, only daughter of Patrick Corbett, married Lieut. Buchon, Royal navy. She died in Isle of White, England, in March, 1853.

Corbett, Charles Henry, the only son of Richard Corbett, was born in Napanee, Ontario, on the 11th of September, 1846. He was educated at the Grammar school, Kingston, and attended the Medical College at Kingston for three years, but was unable to finish his course owing to his father's death. He graduated from the Military school in the same city, in 1865. At the age of nineteen he succeeded his father as governor of the gaol, and has conducted the institution under his charge with marked ability. He takes great interest in temperance work, succeeding the late Rev. F. W. Kirkpatrick as president of the Church of England Temperance Society. He is a member of the Church of England. Is a past master of Ancient St. John's Masonic lodge, No. 3, and a past officer of the Grand lodge of Canada. He has been president of the Kingston Cricket Club, and of the Curling Club, and has always been a patron of manly sports. In January, 1866, he married Hannah Mary, second daughter of the late F. W. Smith, collector of Customs at Napanee, and brother of the late Sir Henry Smith; and has by this marriage ten children, six sons and four daughters. Two of the sons died in infancy. Mr. Corbett, we may add, is also a contributor to various publications of the day, and possesses literary attainments far higher than those of the common order. His eldest son, C. Fred. Corbett, served as a private in the Winnipeg Field Battery during the late rebellion in the North-West, and was in the engagements at Fish Creek, Batoche, etc.

McKeough, William, Chatham, Ontario, born on the 1st May, 1824, at Thurles, County Tipperary, Ireland, is a descendant of the Macindrossers, or MacKeoghs, who were clansmen of Macdougals of Lorne, and assisted the latter in their wars against the Bruces—three of whom, in their attempt to slay King Robert Bruce, succeeded in securing the famous brooch of Lorne, which was a personal ornament of Bruce, and which Sir Walter Scott, in his "Lord of the Isles," describes. But they lost their lives for their audacity. His grandfather, James McKeough, of Rahealty, County of Tipperary, was an uncle of the late Hon. Mr. Justice Keogh, and his grandmother was a sister of the Rev. Francis Mahony, the celebrated "Father Prout," author of the "Bells of Shardon," etc. His father, Thomas McKeough, came to this country while William was a child and settled in Paris, Ontario. Some few years afterwards, losing his entire fortune, William was obliged to leave home at an early age. He became apprenticed to Edward Jackson of Hamilton, where he learned his trade, and with whom he remained until he attained his majority. He settled in Chatham in 1847, and, in company with his brother, John McKeough, carried on a large and extensive business. He was mayor of the town in 1870; was one of the chief promoters and first president of the Erie and Huron Railroad; has been a member of the school board for the past twenty-five years, and chairman thereof for the past eight years; and to his zeal and energy in school matters are due to a great extent the present very efficient condition of the common schools of Chatham. Mr. McKeough is a Reformer in politics, and was the unanimous nominee of the Reform party in Kent to represent them in the Federal parliament on several occasions, but declined the honour. He is a member and a trustee of the Methodist church. Our subject has always taken an active interest in all matters for the promotion of the welfare of the town and county. In 1854 he married Elizabeth, second daughter of the late John Stone, of Oxford, by which union there are three sons and one daughter. The sons are George T. McKeough, M.D., M.R.C.S., Eng., who was gold medalist at Trinity Medical School in 1877, and for some time resident physician to the Royal Free Hospital, London, England; J. Frank McKeough, proprietor of the Chatham Iron Works; and W. E. McKeough, barrister-at-law of Osgoode Hall, Toronto. They have
