Nothing gives more satisfaction to the friends abroad than a nice photograph of the old home or where you live. Nothing more comforting to the "Crusoe" of the family than a nice group of the folk at home gathered around the old family playground—something to remember the old homestead by when the grey hairs shall cover your head thirty, forty or fifty years hence, and nothing more pleasing than a family group with the old house, the garden, the trees, over which to spend a pleasant hour in meditation.

No better time than the present when everything is beautiful. We will go anywhere and the price will please you.
