Miss Alma Sands, writes in part:

"You can judge by my photograph, whether I am a clever user of DIAMOND DYES. It shows a cloth suit which I dyed black. It used to be light brown. I bought some black velvet, and made the trimming and broad girle. I think it is an awfully nice looking suit, with lots of style."

Mrs. D. L. Brown writes:

"I had a white serge suit which soiled so quickly that I put it aside after several dry cleanings. A friend advised me to dye it with DIAMOND DYES. I must confess that I feared I could not re-color it successfully, but it came out beautifully. I dyed it green and trimmed it with lace collar and cuffs. It is now a delight."

"I send you my picture taken in my new green suit, made with the aid of your perfectly splendid dyes."

Truth About Dyes for Home Use.

There are two classes of fabrics—Animal Fibre and Vegetable Fibre Fabrics. Cotton and Linen are animal fibre fabrics. "Union" and "Mixed" goods are usually 60% to 80% Cotton and must be treated as vegetable fibre fabrics.

It is a chemical impossibility to get perfect color results on all classes of fabrics with any dye that claims to color animal fibre fabrics and vegetable fibre fabrics equally well in one bath.

We manufacture two classes of Diamond Dyes, namely—Diamond Dyes for Wool or Silk to color Animal Fibre Fabrics, and Diamond Dyes for Cotton, Linen or Mixed Goods to color Vegetable Fibre Fabrics, so that you may obtain the Very Best results on EVERY fabric.

world little good if any. The next class is the middle girls who are neither working girls or society girls, but are the class of whom people have the highest opinions, who visit the sick and help all they can to make life a pleasure. The third class is more useful, the working girl, who has to work hard to earn the meagre living she manages to get.

Some people think girls are to look at, others to get their virtules ready. While I think a little of them both and a few other things, I think that they ought to help all they can is the main one.

GIRLS.

Dear Puck and Beavers,—I see the new competition for the Beavers now, and I am going to try my luck.

All girls are full of fun, and are glad when they get a chance to have some. They go to school the same as the boys, and whisper to each other when they get the teacher's back turned. At recess and noon they play games, such as hide-and-go-seek, and basket-ball. They see their playmates nearly every day, and sometimes they have a birthday party and ask all their playmates and friends to come and have a good time. They play games and at night have tea, then they leave for home.

In the winter they go skating and sleighriding, which is great sport. Skating, indeed, is good exercise, and is all right as long as it is not too cold. They have to work as well as play, but their work is all inside which is all right on a rainy day, but some days I think they would rather be outside in the sun. I will now close, wishing the Beaver Circle every success.

Chapter IX.

THE TRIALS CONVERGE.

It would be difficult to describe the feelings of annoyance and chagrin which swept over Duvall as he tossed the box of Perrier rice powder over the side of the vessel and watched it float away on the crest of a wave before being swept into the darkness.

He glanced for an instant at his companion, then turned away as he saw the latter's stare of astonishment and dismay. He wanted to be alone, to think out this matter for himself.

With a confusion of ideas racing through his brain, he began to pace the deck, trying to discover wherein his reasoning had been at fault. He went back to the gruesome scene at the house of the ambassador—the murdered valet, with the grim seal of silence upon his lips.

Whoever had committed this murder had made away with the snuff-box; of that he felt certain. Upon what, then, did his suspicions of Seltz rest? The evidence was slender—merely that the latter had had an appointment to meet the murdered man that afternoon, and that a person answering Seltz's description had inquired for the latter at the servants' entrance at M. de Grissac's that evening.

Not very convincing, surely; yet, taken with Seltz's evident intention to leave London for Brussels that night, certainly significant. Following, then, his original hypothesis, that Seltz was the guilty man and had the box in his possession, two solutions of the matter only seemed possible.

The first was, the man in the saloon below, anticipating, perhaps, some attempt to search his baggage, had deliberately provided himself, through Seltz, with a second package, containing a box of rice powder only, which he had placed in his satchel in the belief that if found its innocent contents would divert from him further suspicion.

The careless way in which he had thrown his satchel on the floor beside him favored this theory. It seemed, on sober thought, extremely unlikely that the bearer of so valuable a piece of property would be so thoughtless as to place it loosely in an unlocked hand-bag. Even now the real package might be
