STREET PAVING.

The ratepayers of Halliburton street are seeking relief from taxation in connection with the paving of their street. It cannot be denied that there are many strong reasons why their request should be conceded. The principle on which this work of improvement has been done is that the ratepayers immediately benefited bear the whole cost. The Halliburton street property-owners are now asking that part of the cost be paid out of the general revenue. They are at least on sure ground in saying that they are not the only people to benefit from the improvement. They point out also that not only have they to bear the cost of the new paving, but they have also to pay the cost of the preliminary work of grading. This work, they claim, has always been paid for out of general revenue, and their claim seems sound enough. The question has been complicated unfortunately by the precedent of Commercial street, where the ratepayers paid, or are paying, the whole cost. It may be argued that there is quite a difference between business and residential streets, but as a matter of practice it is not always so easy to draw a straight line of demarcation. The case as it stands at present is that the Halliburton street ratepayers are being taxed more heavily than they expected, and they claim further that the work for which they are being taxed is a benefit to others beside themselves. The difficulty will be to persuade the others that they ought to contribute towards the payment of an improvement to Halliburton street. At the same time it ought to be possible to do something if everybody concerned will approach the question in a reasonable

POINTLESS CRITICISM.

The London Times is still thundering against the government, and the general conduct of the war. Its complaint is now that not only has serious mistakes been made in the field, but that the cabinet has shown no genius for war. The country has never been governed in a strategic sense. It has merely drifted. Surely it was never expected that the cabinet would display a genius for war. It was not a cabinet of war lords, and couldn't be expected to govern in a strategic sense whatever that may be. It sent for the military leaders of the country and put itself under their advice. Lord Kitchener was installed in the War Office, Sir John French placed in command of the armies and the fleet handed over to Sir John Jellicoe. It may be that shortsightedness was shown in the failure to organise a munitions supply, but that is no reason now for pessimistic criticism. Most assuredly Great Britain has suffered from her inexperience, but she has also established a marvellous record of military achievement in a year of war. The tactics of the Times are not according to the British manual of arms.

Alderman McKenzie does not see that anything more can be done with the sidewalk on Bridge street. This will be comforting news to the people who have to use it every day. Perhaps, though, Alderman McKenzie was misled by Alderman Forrester in his question concerning the gravel walk. There may be a pebble or two in its whole length, but it is sand walk superimposed on an ash walk. A few weeks ago the pedestrian walked over the boot tops in fine black ash, now he churns up the loose sand from the seashore. It is a particular and a perfect nuisance for the ladies. Now, however, they have the promise that it may be better when the wet weather comes. It may as a matter of fact be worse, and if water is all that it needs why not sprinkle it and be done with it? Certainly the walk is in a most unsatisfactory condition at present.

BRITISH SUBMARINES THROW TURKS INTO A PANIC.

for the Bosphorus. A toll was levied on all persons crossing the bridge. In the crowd which daily crossed the bridge were representatives of every nationality in every variety of apparel.

London, Aug. 31—Elation at the feat of a British submarine in reaching Constantinople and blowing up the Galata bridge, connecting the main portions of the Turkish capital, and vague uneasiness regarding the reported treaty between Bulgaria and Turkey whereby the former will permit passages of supplies to the Ottoman Empire, provided Germany can clear a path through Serbia, were the mingled feelings with which military critics here today viewed the war situation.

The morale of the Turkish defenders of the Dardanelles, it is felt here, will be shaken further by the blow dealt in the very heart of the Turkish capital.

Despatches report the population in a veritable panic of fear and dread at the progress of the allies' offensive, and this fear, it is believed, will communicate itself gradually to the fighting front even though no gains of marked extent should be made on the Gallipoli Peninsula for several days.

British observers believe September will witness the complete downfall of the Turkish defence until aid comes from without. Hence any attempt to afford succor to the sorely pressed Turks is deemed of far-reaching importance just at this time.

The fact that absolutely no confirmation has been given Berlin's statement that the pact between Bulgaria and Turkey already has been made, helps greatly toward an optimistic feeling, however. The belief is held that Bulgaria will make her decision only after definite replies have been received from Serbia and Greece to the entente powers' proposals. Even though the actual signing of the agreement with Turkey is conceded, it by no means follows, according to the view here, that Bulgaria will act in accordance with the agreement until she is thoroughly satisfied that the concessions granted by the entente powers do not measure up to her ambitions and desires.

GOOD TIME AT CASSIDY'S SIDING

Last Friday evening the Auxiliary Daughters of the Empire of Nanaimo gave a real, old-time concert and dance near Waterloo School, Cassidy Siding.

From the officers, their wives, and soldiers, who honored the event with their presence, all the way to Nanaimo, everybody, their wives and sweethearts were there. You could not miss the place for a guiding star in the shape of a lantern, shone on the gate nearby.

From the big, roomy barn on the hillside could be heard soldiers of the King calling to the groups in khaki that time was passing.

But just here the trouble began for it would be much easier to get into a German trench than to pass the sentries at the door. Miss Emblem, of Meadowbrook Farm, and Miss Lindsay, of Victoria, without the salute and password (four bits.) Inside gay Chinese lanterns, flags and evergreens gave a touch of color to the surroundings.

"God Save the King" was sung heartily to Miss Cavalsky's accompaniment, then Mr. Jos. Taylor of South Wellington followed with a few happy remarks.

Then the first dance, "Kittling" by Miss Cavalsky was joined in by everyone.

More dancing, and a dramatic dialogue on "Women's Suffrage" by Minard's Liniment relieves Neuralgia.

Master James Taylor and Miss Richards formed a pleasant reminder of how soon the women really are to getting our franchise.

Mr. Willoughby's dance numbers were unanimously encored, but the tilt of Private Flynn's brisk airs just got you and old and young joined in the merry throng and made the rafters ring with the fun and light-heartedness of it all, sure who could be thinking of the girl he left behind him when there were so many fair maidens present.

And when "Tipperary" sounded forth there wasn't an old man there—they were all twenty—and it was the time of their lives they had, dancing for King and Country.

Refreshments were served. Our old friend Mr. Emblem gave us one of his stirring sea songs, an encore, and another patriotic song in which everybody joined.

But the best of friends must part and it was time for the "Home Sweet Home" waltz.

After Miss Lindsay's spirited rendering of "Rejected" there ought to be a number of recruits. Indeed a most enjoyable evening was spent. Not forgetting "Our Overseas Lads" we sang "Auld Lang Syne."

The many friends who so kindly assisted us in any way we return our heartiest thanks. $50. was the outcome of the evening's pleasure, and is but the first of other efforts we hope to make in the near future to "do our bit" for our country.

BIJOU THEATRE

There is one part of the program today that will appeal especially to the ladies, that is the latest fashions from Paris and shown along with Pathé's English War Gazette. The feature will be a three-reel comedy drama "Nick Winters and the Masked Thieves." It is really a burlesque on Sherlock Holmes for running international crooks to their doom. Many amusing situations arise in the three reels and there is enough dramatic plot to carry the picture. Mr. J. Bray presents a comedy cartoon "When Knights were Bold" that is bound to please both young and old.

Zurich, Aug. 31—A proclamation ordering that all water be boiled in order to avoid an epidemic of cholera has been issued by the police of Berlin, according to a despatch received here today.

WHY ADVERTISE?

There are still some merchants who have not found a reason even yet. They are not convinced that at any time it pays to Advertise, but when times are good they may take a chance. Come hard times they stop at once.

There are other Business Men who believe that it is all right to advertise under certain conditions. But they, also, if Hard Times come along, and it becomes necessary to cut down expenses, take first chop at their advertising account.

A little reflection should convince the merchant that this is poor business. He will not do the same volume of business in bad times as in good times, but he will do better with advertising than without. He will do better with regular advertising than with spasmodic splurges. The merchant who only advertises once in a Blue Moon will inevitably be disappointed if he expects to clean out his store with say two day's advertising. Even the more regular advertiser may not do so well as he expected from extra advertising. Can he say he would have done as well as without the advertising.

To be effective, advertising must be regular, and it should always be carefully attended to more particularly in Hard Times.
