Irish exchanges record the death of Right Rev. Mgr. McNamee, P. P., V. F., at the age of eighty-four. Deceased celebrated Mass in the Church of the Sacred Heart, Omagh, the day before his death.

Mother Mary Anastasia Beckett, of the Convent of St. John the Evangelist, Orr, Ireland, died recently in her sixty-first year, and the sixty-sixth of her religious life, being the last of a band of English ladies who in 1839 joined the Order of Mercy, established in Dublin by Mother McAuley. Mrs. Beckett was a convert, and was instructed and rooted into the Church by the Rev. George Spencer at St. Mary's Church, Osoot.

Press despatch from Rome says that a manifesto, issued by Bishop Bonomelli, of Verona, who is known as a favorite of the Pope, has created a sensation throughout Italy. It shows that reconciliation between Church and State is within a measurable distance. It admits that the Church, irremovable in matters of faith and morals, is adaptable to a new political situation, the restoration of the temporal power of the Church being impossible and antagonism being ruinous to both Church and State. Bishop Bonomelli strongly praises the King, and expresses the hope that the Pope, like Pius IX., in 1848, will soon give his blessing to Italy.

It is not very many years since the power of the Catholics in Holland was a small, almost a negligible quantity. But they have limited their German co-religionists in nursing their political strength, and now they are a very strong force. The press has just recorded the results of the general election to the Second Chamber of the States-General. Twenty-three Catholics, thirteen Orthodox Protestants, eight Liberals of the Left, three Liberals of the Right, eight Historic Christians and five Liberal Democrats have been returned. The Catholics have formed a working agreement with the Orthodox Protestants, and the united body can easily overcome all opposition.

Says the London "Catholic Times": "We chronicled last week the result of the debate in the French Chambers as to the allocation of the churches. Under Article XI. the ownership of them is given to the local associations of worship. But the text of the article is very ambiguous, and already violent anti-clerical papers, like the "Action," are proclaiming that the application of the law will soon "oust the Catholics. Meanwhile the 15th article has decided the fate of the episcopal palaces, the presbyteries and seminaries. After some discussion, it was voted, by a majority of 255, that the episcopal palaces should be granted free for two years to the use of the Bishops; the presbyteries to the priests for a period of five years. After that the latter would fall to the possession of the State, and be paid for at a rental, by the local associations for the use of the resident priest. And the seminaries? The Government would that theological seminaries be, as part of the Church, and be kindly granted it organization, for five years, and regarded as second try. But the small sem. schools are to come under the law and such establishments, i. e., they will be promptly refused authorization and made over to the State. The outlook for the French Church is clearly very clouded. Perhaps Catholics may waken up and put in at the elections of 1906 a majority that will respect their wishes. We shall see. Grave indeed is the blow dealt at the principle of ecclesiastical authority by the article number fifteen of the separation bill. Hitherto the Bishops have been able to make their will operative in the financial as well as the spiritual sphere. But henceforth they will be powerless. The local associations of worship are to have complete control of the goods of the Church, and as they will be composed of inhabitant living and domiciled in the commune concerned, it is clear that the principle of ecclesiastical jurisdiction over ecclesiastical property is seriously imperiled. The Bishops will practically cease to wield control in matters affecting parochial property of any kind. Several speeches appeared to the Chambers not to violate the ordinary ecclesiastical legislation, but in vain. The Government resisted every suggestion, and forced through the clause as it stood, thus delivering the parishes and their property to a committee of people who may be Catholics, Jews, Free-thinkers or anything under the sun. The passing of Article XV. will make arrangements with the Holy See impossible."

In Conversation

It Is The Correct Thing.

To remember that more talk looks a great deal of being conversation. To remember that personalities are ill-bred. To listen respectfully to old people and those whose position entitles them to consideration. To avoid talking, scandal and gossip.

To avoid coarseness in conversation as one would the leprosy. To remember the Golden Rule and do unto others as you would have them do unto you, when tempted to repeat an ill-natured or compromising bit of gossip.

For women, old and young, married and single, not to indulge in indelicate and coarse expressions, or select topics for conversation which they would blush to have overheard by gentlemen.

To manifest marked displeasure when indelicate and immodest subjects are broached.

To frown down all mention even of salacious books and newspaper scandals. Good breeding as well as delicacy requires this.

To speak deferentially to superiors, kindly to inferiors, and courteously to equals.

To remember that if you can not keep your own secrets, it is hardly fair to expect your friends to keep them for you.

To remember that slander is a grievous sin.

To remember that religious discussion in general conversation are usually productive of but little good.

To explain patiently, clearly, and lucidly any point connected with the Church to those who are sincere in seeking information.

If unable to give a clear answer to say so at once, and not run the risk of giving a false impression in what might prove a serious matter.

To correct patiently and courteously any misstatement made in regard to the Church or her history.

For a person who mingles much in cultivated society to be familiar with the Catholic position in regard to the leading questions of the day, and to be "leaded and primed" conversationally when the occasion demands.

To remain always calm, cool, and collected in an argument.

For a Catholic to offer to loan suitable books to one seeking information, and then decline, if he feels like it, any further discussion at the time.

To practice Hannibal's tactics, and carry the war into Africa, in an argument; in other words, to ask an explanation of the creed of an opponent rather than to spend all one's force in defending one's own.

To remember that a fool can ask more questions in a minute than a wise man can answer in an hour.

—The Correct Thing for Catholics.

Mgr. Nugent Dead.

Advice from Liverpool, England, announces the death on the 4th inst. of Right Rev. Mgr. James Nugent, the venerable philanthropist, whose zeal and self-sacrifice in behalf of orphans and outcasts have made his name a household word throughout Great Britain for nearly half a century. Mgr. Nugent, who was in his eighty-fourth year, recently visited this country in company with Dom Gasquet, abbot-president of the English Benedictines. He had many Western cities, and was about to begin his return journey when he succumbed to a rheumatic attack. After several months of rest and careful nursing he sailed for Liverpool, where he landed May 17. During the voyage he sustained a serious fall, caused by a sudden lurch of the vessel, and though recent reports were to the effect that he was slowly regaining his strength, the accident is supposed to have been the indirect cause of his death. In the great Mercury express Mgr. Nugent, or plain Father Nugent, as he was more familiarly known, had for many years been the most prominent and most popular citizen, beloved by all classes and creeds. He first attracted public notice when he established a "Boy's Brigade," which he maintained out of his own private means, and when these were exhausted he raised the necessary funds by delivering sermons and lectures, the legends of which were contained in the motto which he chose for this excellent institution, "Save the Boys!" A very forcible and eloquent orator, he drew large congregations and audiences at the sermons and lectures, and the results that have followed his great work in this direction have been most successful—schools after schools have been established, and thousands of homeless and friendless boys have been rescued from the dangerous life of the streets and slums, educated, come, as the vast majority of them have become and are yearly becoming, honest, industrious and upright citizens, a credit to themselves and a glory to Mgr. Nugent.

But the boys' refugees were but a small portion of the lifework of this octogenarian priest. To do justice to his long career of practical charity and benevolence a bulky volume would have to be written. The founder of the League of the Cross, a total abstinence organization which has spread from Liverpool all over the United Kingdom, he spent the best years of his prolonged life in the arduous championship of the principles of temperance. Tens of thousands owe to his fervid advocacy of total abstinence their liberation from the thrall of drink, and their consequent reconciliation with the Church, the resumption of the practice of their religion and the betterment of their social position. In the case of Catholic journalism he spent many a toilsome year and many a thousand dollars, until at last he placed the Catholic Times (formerly of Liverpool, but now of London) on the excellent financial footing which it now occupies as one of the most widely read and influential Catholic newspapers in the world. But the labors in which he spent the closing years of his fruitful apostolic life were perhaps the most important of those that occupied his attention throughout his lengthy existence. They had for their most praiseworthy object—the attainment of which they have been successful—the establishment of night shelters and other houses for outcast and destitute women and girls, and of a home for those of them about to become mothers. His great sympathetic heart was touched with tender compassion for these unfortunate people, many of them more sinned against than sinning. The initial expenses of founding and equipping this institution at West Dingle, Liverpool, were borne by himself.

Mgr. Nugent was one of the very few public men who have been honored with public monuments during their lifetime. On a prominent site in Liverpool is a statue of Mgr. Nugent, erected with money subscribed by citizens of all creeds and classes.

The civilization of the world is Christian civilization. The more distinctly Christian it continues to be, the more real and lasting and fruitful will it be. The farther it removes itself from the Christian idea, the greater will be its decline, to the immense injury of social welfare. Hence, from the very nature of things, the Church became in fact the guardian and defender of Christian civilization. In bygone ages this fact was recognized and admitted, and it still forms the enduring basis of civil legislation. On this fact were based the relations between the Church and the different States, the public recognition of the authority of the Church in all matters that in any way relate to conscience, the subordination of all the laws of the State to the Divine laws of the gospel, the concord of the two powers, Church and State, in procuring the temporal welfare of the people in such a way that their eternal welfare should not be interfered with.

MYSCOTT LAWBOYS.

A little boy of four years of age, on noticing for the first time a lock of grey hair on his father's head, asked, "Papa, why are some of your hairs grey?"
"Thinking to drive home a moral lesson, the father answered, "Papa has a new grey hair every time his little boy is naughty."
The child seemed lost in thought, but after a pause said bravely, "Then grandpa must have had seven naughty boys."

Gentlemen.—Last August my horse was badly cut in eleven places by a barbed wire fence. Three of the cuts, (small ones) healed soon, but the others became foul and rotten, and though I tried many kinds of medicine they had no beneficial result. At last a doctor advised me to use MINARD'S LINIMENT and in four weeks' time every sore was healed and the hair has grown over each one in fine condition. The Liniment is certainly wonderful in its working.
