The temperance committee made its reports as follows: Not to revoke one jot of the demand for immediate prohibition; believing that the liquor traffic cannot be legalized without sin, we are driven to the inference that every act of voluntary complicity with the issue of any license is mainly indefensible, so that we cannot indorse any Christian man or nember of our church incurring any avoidable responsibility for the authorizing or issue of a license; we believe that in no respect is it the duty of the temperance people to enforce any temperance legislation whatever beyond that ordinary support which we give to any law; such enforcement belongs exclusively to the Government, which in no case ought to evade its responsibility. The report recommended further submission of the local option measure in municipalties and advise church organizations not to visit summer resorts where liquor is sold. After one of the most exciting discussion of the conference the report was adopted. It was manifest that a considerable minority dissent from the proposal that Christian men should not accept an appointment to the Board of License Commissioners.

The proposed changes of greatest importance are those relating to universal suffrage and the adoption of the referendum system. Of the two the latter is, in some respects, the more vital to the interests of the people, as it subjects all radical legislation to the acceptance of the electorate. The political outlook of the world to-day The political outlook of the world to-day is more serious than at any other time in the past history of the world.
