"Could you play anything at sight, Mademoiselie?"
She wished for the floor to open and Ewallow her. "Ernest," s said Monsieur Prosper, "just run downstairs and bring up a roll of sie and my violin-case. What new torture was she to under-

This is a duet, Mademoiselle, that I have just been composing for violin and piano. Would you see what you can make of your part?" The notes seemed to swim before her eyes; but she attacked them mechani-

Ah slower than that, Mademoiselle. One, two, three, four, one—oh, forte, Mademoiselle, for the sake of heaven!— that's it—one, two—faster—lighter—the time there-mark the time, sacre nom de Dieu! So-oh, horrible! with grace, Mademoiselle, with grace! Oh, misericorde, don't you know what legato means? Not the pedals there, I implore you—are you mad? Sacre nom de Dieu! Now, then—keep on so. Oh, faster, faster—prestissimo. Mille diables. Sacre nom— Tonnerre d'enfer—cent cochons. Eacr-r-r-re!

And so, for a whole half hour, which seemed to her to be three hundred years at least, her ears were filled, until, what with the music itself, and the shouting and stamping and swearing in which her tyrant indulged when the impressario side of his nature was lost in that of the composer, and what with her own nervousness, she almost lost her senses. But Monsieur Prosper showed her no mercy. No sooner had she struck the last loud chord than he, having worked himself into that state so well known to and feared by the friends of all poets and composers, in which a man cannot restrain his appetite for his own works, when he has once tasted them, began to

It need not be said that she had to through it all again with him or that scolding she received was something terrific. "What do you think of that, Mademoiselle?" he said at last, as he returned the violin to its case.

She murmured something.

"Ah, I thought you would like it. That is quite a la Moretti, and yet not without is quite a la Moretti, and yet not without originality. But don't flatter yourself that you have played it—that is quite another thing. But I must be off," he added, looking at his watch, that was suspended to a gold chain as large as a cable. "Miss Raymond has sent me the wrong cousin, it seems," Monsieur Prosper said to himself as he left the house. Poor Marie! Her head ached as though it would split; her brain was in a whirl, and it is no exaggeration to say, though the cause may seem slight enough to those who are not troubled with the nervousness of diffidence, that death would have been a relief to her. She had not strength enough left to close the hateful plane, which stood there an openly ac-cusing witness of her shame. Had she but had the moral courage to refuse to disgrace herself! DOCTOR SAID

Excruciating Pains in the Back and Loins-A Plaster Cast Necessary for Temporary Relief-How a Cure Was Found in

We leave Mr. Demers to describe his own case as he wrote it in a letter to us. Few human beings are ever called upon to suffer as he did from kidney disease. You cannot wonder at it that he is now enthusiastic in the praise of have given him a new lease of life. Mr. S. O. Demers, Conception Station, Labelle county, Que., writes: "I am writing you in order that others who suffer as I did may profit by my experience. For three years I was obliged to give up all work on account of severe pains in my loins, back and I had become so stiff in my body that I could not lean over without suffering the most excruciating

"I consulted several doctors and specialists, but all of them pronounced me incurable, and could not even give me relief. One had me incased in plaster in order to support the body, for I suffered dreadfully, but this only gave me temporary relief, and I thought myself condemned to die without being able to find a cure. 'About this time I received one of Dr. Chase's books, and found my case described exactly. The sample of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills which came with this book gave me marked relief, so I bought some more and continued the treatment. Gradually the sharp pains in the back and sides grew less severe, and my bowels became regular and active-constipation had been one of my worst symptoms. "I had also suffered from indigestion and gas on the stomach, pains between the shoulders, in the back, loins and sides, frequent desire urinate, and pain in making water, stiffness of the body, and all the suffering accompanying derangements of the liver and kidneys.

"Since using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills these ailments have become less and less, until now they have entirely disappeared. I have great confidence in Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and they have done so much for me that I cannot say enough in their praise. The people in this county are surprised to see me so well again, and no wonder, for my cure has been almost miraculous." Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills; one come a little more composed, a note was brought to the door, directed in a strange hand to Mademoiselle Marie Lefort.

"5 — Street, Golden Square.

"Dear Mademoiselle —A despairing fellow-creature implores you to grant him a favor. I am engaged to conduct a concert at Lady Weston's in Park Lane, and Lane going to introduce at it for the and I am going to introduce at it for the first time my duet. M. Creville will take the violin; Herr Schwarmer the plano. Takes, did I say?—was to take! for the scoundrel has sprained his thumb—would it had been his neck!

"I therefore fly to you, Mademoiselle, in whose eyes I read a compassionate soul. Play it for me: and for eternity oblige LOUIS PROSPER. "The concert is not till the 10th, so ou will have plenty of time to study it. I. Creville will bring it you tomorrow. And, for the love of heaven, mind about "I will take care you shall be satisfied about terms. Au revoir, et bon debut!"

What! she asked to play Monsieur Prosper's own work in public at Monsieur Prosper's own request, and in the place of a celebrated professor! Surely there must be some mistake! But no, the note was only too clear, and only too ainly directed to her, and to no other. That in the world should she do? Her first thought was to refuse at once. But then, how could she dare to offend this terrible Monsieur Prosper? At last, after much unhappy meditation, she made un hap mind to wait till the she made up her mind to wait till the morning. Perhaps by then her persecutor might have thought better of his extraordinary request. Would it might prove so! Meanwhile—for she was weary of this new exercise of thinking about herself—there was nothing to do but sit down and finish darning. Fleurette's down and finish darning Fleurette's stockings. When this was finished she went and looked at the children and then went back to bed, where the music of the duet came back to her in the most terrible form of all. Queen Mab was not kind to her that night. CHAPTER XI. And so Marie entered upon a week of wretchedness, for Monsieur Prosper, now that he had once obtained a hold upon her, showed his promised gratitude in a most ungrateful fashion. He not only made her a slave to the duet, but treated her as his pupil without the least reference to what might be her own wishes and views, or even consulting her on the matter. Of course, she applied to her husband for advice; but he, to whom art was only a word which conveved nothing more than the idea of womanish amusement, with which he had no sympathy, was unable to understand her embarrassment, especially earned that she was to be paid for her

Besides, his own affairs were absorbing his attention more and more. He was bringing the same industry and perse-verence to bear upon his new study of the common law of England by which he had already made Greek and mathe-matics pay so well. The only difference in his style of study was that he found more pleasure in his work now than at Cambridge, and like it better for its own sake. Blackstone was far more congenial to his nature than either Newton

And so, on the very evening on which And so, on the very evening on which his wife was undergoing the nervous tortures of her debut, he sat in his chambers in the Middle Temple, of which Inn he had become a member, thinking, not about her, but about himself. He was taking stock of his position, for he was practical even when the Middle Temple port had obliged him to put off was practical even when the Middle Temple port had obliged him to put off his evening spell of work for an hour or two and the work with a purpose when two, and thought with a purpose when another would have dreamed; and on comparing what he was now with what he was even so short a time since as when he had been Hugh Lester's com-panion on the Redchester coach, he was by no means dissatisfied with the result. But still there was one hard fact of which it was impossible to get rid, which went far to spoil all his self-gratulation. He was by no means given to useless regret or to crying after spoiled milk, and certainly not given to calling nimself a fool; but now, as he balanced his account of profit and loss, he could his account of profit and loss, he could not help almost thinking himself one.

"It is a hard case that a man should be punished for the mistakes that he commits in his boyhood. I shall now have to go through life with a burden from which I shall never be free, when freedom from every kind of burden is absolutely necessary. Luckily she is not a woman who will interfere with me more than she can help, or perversely more than she can help, or perversely stand upon her rights. But that will not prevent my having all the disadvantages of having a wife, combined with those of keeping a mistress, without having any of the advantages of either. I believe that if I were free and played my cards decently well, I might try for the New Court stakes, and not be last in the betting. As it is, I suppose the prize will fall, as usual, to that ass Lester, who seems to have nothing to do but open his mouth and the good things fall into it of themselves. I don't suppose into it of themselves. I don't suppose that he was born richer than I: an clearly not with more brains. And yet, without any trouble or merit on his part, first because he becomes heir to one of the finest estates in the country; then, again, without trouble or merit wn, without even caring about it, drops into a seat in parliament; without having to look for then, without having to look for her, there is an embodiment of all the virtues ready made to his hand. And I, at his age, have had to fight with fortune to wrest from her some three hundred a year. I have borne the whole heat of a contested election for the sake of another, and I am chained for life-well, to another embodiment of all the virtues. Perhaps it would be better if she were not quite so immaculate. Yes, it is certainly a hard case! If I were only free, I do not see why the master of New Court should not be as successful against Earl's Dene as for it; and then This exclamation was caused not by a tap at the door, but by a sound as though the door was being attacked by a battering-ram. He turned round as he spoke, and, to his horrer, beheld the form of his old acquaintance, Dick Barton.

I do not wish to discourage you, but I feel certain that the Columbia will lick you." Mr. Post said that to race both vachts with American crews would not decided whether American or British yachtsmen were superior. He maintained he said that an American crew could get better results from the Shamrock, and that a British crew would get less speed from the Columbia. He thought that under these conditions the Shamrock would win. He said he would send a representative to London to complete averagements with Sir Thomas Liston. arrangements with Sir Thomas Lipton.

New York, March 4. - Next week may see the close of taking testimony in the trial of Albert T. Patrick for the alleged murder of William Marsh Rice, although the prosecution has still some witnesses to be heard, and the defense has yet to produce its testimony, of which there will be a great deal.

The defense will endeavor to show that Rice was not murdered at all, but died a natural death. Some of the star witnesses for the prosecution, among them Valet Jones, will be discredited as far as possible. The telephone girl has had her day in the trial, summoned by the prosecu-

It would not have done to have asked any of the pretty girls how much she had heard of conversations the wires between Jones and Patrick. Such testimony would have a "tendency to degrade." Therefore the sum of the testimony given by the tel-ephone employes amounted to no more than that on the fatal Sept. 23, 1900, somebody living in the Berkshire apartment house (otherwise No. 609 Thirty-eighth street), had called up "1,314A Columbus" (otherwise Albert

They came to study Patrick and to form their own impressions of the appearance of a man on trial for his life. Many of the women pronounced him good-looking, and two declared him handsome.

New York, March 4. - A. B. Cohen, one of W. M. Rice's agents in Texas, who was on the stand when court adjourned Friday, was recalled yesterday. He told of delay in his pay checks of July and August. He corroborated the story told by Charles F. Jones that there was such delay. Jones testified that he held back the checks at Patrick's direction, and that he finally sent to Mr. Cohen two checks handed him (Jones) by Patrick.
