The beautiful residence, known as "Riverview," 50 Ridout street, South London, owned by the late Charles Hunt, whose family have been the only occupants for more than 50 years, is to be sold to close the estate. It is situated on one of the most picturesque spots in London, overlooking the River Thames. Views of same are on exhibition in the window of E. J Sanders, photographer, corner Dundas and Richmond streets. The house is of white brick, with stone foundation, English in architecture. Its divisional walls are solid and of special thickness. The rooms are of extra size. The Reception Hall, with handsome winding oak staircase, hand carved. Double Drawing-Rooms, connected by sliding doors. The mantels here are of solid white marble, exquisitely carved. The Dining-Room has a black marble mantel. The cornices in these rooms are beautiful. On the right of the Hall is the Library. In this room is a grey marble mantel. Its woodwork is bird's-eye maple. The Den opens off the Library and is very cosy. Six bedrooms upstairs; three facing the front; three at the back, servant's room and bathroom. The house is heated in winter by steam, and in the spring and fall by hot air. Both in good order. The Cellars are all light, dry and airy. A new roof was put on the house a few years ago, also a beautiful new verandah, very large and modern. This property will be sold by auction on Tuesday, the 15th of June, at 3 o'clock. For particulars of sale, apply to Fraser & Moore, solicitors. Interior of house is now open for inspection.
