

Had Constipation for Six Months Was Relieved by Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills

A free motion of the bowels daily should be the rule of everyone, then there will be no constipation, sick or bilious spells, heartburn, foul breath, sour stomach, etc.

Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills will regulate the flow of bile to act properly on the bowels, thus making them active and regular, removing the constipation and all its allied troubles.

Mrs. R. C. Hunt, Port George, N. S. writes: "I have been troubled by being constipated for the last six months. My tongue has been terribly coated, so much so that it made my breath bad. I was talking to a friend about it and she advised me to use Milburn's Laxa-Liver Pills which I did, and now I am perfectly well. My tongue is as smooth as it was before I got that way, and I owe it all to your Pills, of which I only used two vials."

Price 50c a vial at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price. The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.—Advt.

Don't Spoil Your Child's Hair By Washing It

When you wash your child's hair, be careful what you use. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much free alkali, for this is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle. The best thing to use is Milled Coconut Oil Shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces.

Simply put two or three teaspoonfuls of Milled in a cup of water with a little warm water, then moisten the hair with water and rub the Milled in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh-looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust and dandruff.

You can get Milled Coconut Oil Shampoo at any drug store and a few ounces will last everyone in the family for months. Be sure you get Milled. Look for the name Watkins on the package.—Advt.

DON'T SQUEEZE BLACK- HEADS—DISSOLVE THEM

Squeezing and pinching out blackheads make the pores large and cause irritation. Blackheads are caused by accumulations of dirt and oil and secretions from the skin, and are not only a safe and sure way and one that never fails to get rid of them—a simple way, in fact, to get rid of them. Just get from any drug store about two ounces of peroxide powder—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet face—rub over the blackheads briskly for a few seconds—wash off, and you'll be surprised to see that every blackhead has disappeared, and the skin will be left soft and the pores in their natural condition.—Advt.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Costs Little and Overcomes
Trouble Almost Overnight.

Any breaking out of the skin, even if itching, itching, or even if it is a little sore, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur. Because of its germ-destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema, fights up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without other treatment. From skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowley's Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—Advt.

If Ruptured Try This Free

Apply It To Any Rupture, Old or Recent,
Large or Small and You Are On The Road That Has Convinced Thousands.

SENT FREE TO PROVE THIS

Any one ruptured, man, woman or child, should write at once to W. S. Rice, 2072B Main St., Adams, N. Y., for a free trial of his wonderful stimulating application. Just put it on the rupture and the muscles begin to tighten; they begin to bind together so that the opening closes naturally and the need of support or truss or appliance is then done away with. Don't neglect to send for this free trial. Why suffer this? Why risk of gangrene and such dangers from a small and innocent little rupture, the kind that has thrown thousands on the operating table? A host of men and women are daily running a hot net because their ruptures do not hurt nor prevent them from getting around. Write at once for the free trial, as it is certainly a wonderful thing and has aided in the cure of ruptures that were as big as a man's two fists. Try and write at once, using the coupon below.

FREE FOR RUPTURE.

W. S. Rice, Inc.,
2072B Main St., Adams, N. Y.
You may send me entirely free a Sample Treatment of my stimulating application for Rupture.
Name _____
Address _____
Province _____

Cuticura Soap Will Help You Clear Your Skin

Cuticura Soap is the most effective skin cleanser ever known. It is given to millions of people who suffer from skin diseases, such as eczema, psoriasis, and other skin troubles. It is the only skin cleanser that is both effective and gentle. It is the only skin cleanser that is both effective and gentle. It is the only skin cleanser that is both effective and gentle.

Speedy Relief

IS GIVEN TO MILLIONS OF PEOPLE WHO SUFFER FROM SKIN DISEASES, SUCH AS ECZEMA, PSORIASIS, AND OTHER SKIN TROUBLES. IT IS THE ONLY SKIN CLEANSER THAT IS BOTH EFFECTIVE AND GENTLE. IT IS THE ONLY SKIN CLEANSER THAT IS BOTH EFFECTIVE AND GENTLE.

ROBERT'S SYRUP

OF THE EXTRACT OF COD LIVER AND YAC
The Assembly gave third reading to a bill providing for the payment of export bounties on livestock and beef. The chief opposition to the bill came from the labor members, who contended that the proposed bounties would benefit the storage companies without benefiting the producers or consumers.

BOARD CONSIDERS THREE LOCATIONS FOR NEW SCHOOL

Discuss Merits and Demerits of Proposed Sites in West
London.

OFFERS LAND GRATIS

Dr. H. T. Reason Would Donate
Property For Erection of Structure.

It is almost certain that the new West London public school will be erected on one of three sites selected yesterday by the building and property committee of the board of education during a tour of inspection in that part of the city.

The three properties visited and listed are, the Dr. H. T. Reason estate, Bottrill's field, and the site of the present school, including some additional property. Options will be secured on the land and the final choice left to a meeting of the board as a whole.

The first property visited was one offered to the board gratis by Dr. H. T. Reason who wishes in return that the school be known as the "Catherine Reason Memorial School."

The site consists of any portion of 35 acres which comprise the estate road between Charles and Oxford streets. The land is somewhat lower than either Oxford street or Wharncliffe road and it is feared that it could be utilized.

Bottrill's field consists of three or four acres of level ground situated between Oxford street and the C. P. Wharncliffe road. At the present time it is being used as a playground by the Public Utilities Commission.

The land is high and dry and is of the proper size. There is some objection to its location, however, for it is feared that it is located too near the railway tracks and too far from the center of the district, although it is only two short blocks from the present school.

DELIGHTS WITH SONG AT INSTITUTE RECITAL

Carrie Fitchett Reveals Much Talent at Concert, Assisted by Miss E. James.

By A. MINOR.
Striking and pleasing personality, combined with ease and grace, are invaluable assets for the student of singing, ambitious to become an artist, or even just to give pleasure from time to time to the public with her music.

These are possessed in abundance by Miss Carrie Fitchett, contralto, in the London Institute of Musical Art attracted an audience which filled the hall to the very top. Miss Fitchett revealed a voice of unusual depth, power and warmth, especially apparent in the more substantial work, such as "One Fleeting Hour" (Laurance), "May Night" (George), "Down Here" (Brahms), "Sappho Ode" (Brahms), "Bonjour Monsieur" (Pessard), and "The Salvation of the Dawn" (Kurteneier).

With further training to harness her undoubted talent, give to her voice even quality throughout, make her vocal art a medium of expression for what she most obviously feels and understands, the concert platform would have genuine acquisition in Miss Fitchett.

Miss James, who has a most pleasing tone, good intonation and musical feeling, gave much pleasure with her vocal art in "The Zingari Dance" (Drda), "Hungarian Dance" (Laurance), and "Hungarian Dance" (Laurance).

Will Ask King to Omit
Titles in South Africa
Col. Creswell Gives Notice of Presentation of Address.

Associated Press Despatch.
Cape Town, S. A., April 27.—In the House of Assembly Wednesday, Col. Creswell, leader of the Labor party, gave notice of motion for the presentation of an address to the king, praying that his majesty refrain from conferring titles on his subjects domiciled in the Union of South Africa.

The Assembly gave third reading to a bill providing for the payment of export bounties on livestock and beef. The chief opposition to the bill came from the labor members, who contended that the proposed bounties would benefit the storage companies without benefiting the producers or consumers.

Solemn Beauty Reigns As Duke of York Marries

Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon Becomes Bride of Member of British Royalty, While Nation Rejoices In Romance.

Associated Press Despatch.
London, April 27.—The Duke of York and Lady Elizabeth Bowes-Lyon joined hands and hearts before the golden altar of Westminster yesterday, while Britain poured out its blessing.

The magnificent church service that elevated the modest Scotch girl from the common ranks to a place in the crown of the empire would have excited a king or queen.

Hallowed Walls Enshrine.
The great edifice in parliament square, which enshrines within its hallowed walls the mortal remains of kings, queens, martyrs, saints and heroes, has been the scene of a transcending interest, but it has witnessed few that surpassed in beauty and solemnity today's romantic event.

All the members of the royal family and a brilliant array of foreign princes, nobles, ambassadors and ministers, with their ladies, were there.

The entire service was conducted with the traditional precision of British royal events. Only when the bride was called upon by the archbishop of Canterbury to repeat the solemn ritual beginning:

"I take thee to be my wedded husband," did her manner betoken a sign of nervousness. Her voice was scarcely audible to the vast congregation.

The bridegroom gave the impression of a man at happy ease. Queen Mary wore a solemn, severely dignified expression, and kept her eyes upon the bride couple throughout. The venerable dowager, Queen Alexandra, gave the royal ceremony a human touch by moving out of her place and bestowing kisses upon the members of the party as they came within the chancel.

Next to the bride and groom, Princess Mary and the Prince of Wales were the objects of the most intense attention. Wales appeared to be the calmest man in the abbey, and he stood with the thumb of his right hand on his hip, looking on at the ceremony. At one point Alexandra leaned toward him and whispered in his ear what some in the audience declared must have been good advice to a bachelor.

The wedding ceremony began promptly at 11:30 o'clock. After the king and queen, the other royals and clergy had taken their places, the soft, melodious tones of the invisible male choir, accompanied by the sonorous booming of the great organ flowed over the gathering, filling the vast abbey with moving cadences.

The bride in the simplest and daintiest gown probably ever made for a royal marriage, then moved slowly to the steps of the altar, the arm of her tall, courtly father, the Earl of Strathmore. She carried no bridal bouquet, having deposited it on the tomb of the unknown soldier.

She was joined soon afterward by the bridegroom, who presented a striking figure in his blue uniform of the Royal Air Force, with the blue ribbon of the garter across his shoulder and a golden sword at his side. The six bridesmaids, two of whom are soon to become brides themselves, stood behind the couple, the ensemble presenting a delightful picture.

As the Duke and his bride joined hands, the sun, which had not revealed itself for several days, suddenly emerged from the mist, and its light, coming through the high, vaulted windows of the abbey, cast an effulgence upon the gallant Duke and his lovely bride and brought into bold relief the touches of gold, crimson and silver in the costumes of the brilliant assemblage of spectators.

The Duke stood fully a head taller than Lady Elizabeth, his erect, muscular frame and the ruddy glow of his countenance contrasting strongly with the delicate figure of his bride, whose robe of unrelieved white seemed to accentuate the paleness of her features.

After the archbishop of Canterbury had recited the usual ritual, the Duke placed the ring on the fourth finger of his bride's left hand, and in a reverent voice said: "With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship and with all my worldly goods I thee endow." The archbishop then offered prayer, pronounced the couple man and wife and proclaimed to the vast congregation:

"Those whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." A Knelt at the Altar.

He added his blessing and the newly-married pair advanced inside the sanctuary and knelt at the altar while the choir sang Wesley's Chant. The service was concluded with a short prayer and benediction as the congregation knelt in silent devotion. The royal couple then repaired to the chapel of St. Edward and the confessor, where they signed the marriage register.

After signing the register, the Duke and Duchess were escorted by the clergy through the nave to the familiar accompaniment of Men-odors wedding march, and passed out to receive the plaudits of the waiting multitudes. Their return to Buckingham Palace through miles of cheering humanity was like a procession of triumph.

A wedding breakfast, presided over by the king and queen, was served in the state dining-room, and shortly after four o'clock the happy couple left for their honeymoon in Surrey.

to the best traditions. All the day before it had rained steadily, and the falling spirits the lugubrious sight of men engaged in putting up flags and bunting and every form of gay decoration under the depressing atmosphere of continuous drizzle and a bleak wind. Long before dawn the streets surrounding the abbey were half thronged.

Made Effort to Improve.
When the important hours of the day approached, the weather, as though aware of what was expected of it, seemed to be making a conscientious effort to improve, but it was not until Lady Elizabeth left her house in Bruton street that the first ray of sunshine lighted up the town. More than an hour before she left her home the abbey was nearly full.

It is an impressive experience to be there on an occasion of the kind. One sits in a corner surrounded by the statues of the great dead and watches the arrival of the living great. One looks up and sees above one the outstretched arms of Chatham, the falcon eyes of Gladstone or the recumbent figure of Wolfe. Each looks round and sees Mr. Bonar Law, with a hair a little ruffled by the unwelcome use of a cooked hat; Mr. Winston Churchill, looking younger and thinner after a holiday on the Riviera; or Admiral Beatty, with his breast graining under the weight of the medals that it bears.

Then there are the ambassadors, sitting in a row of separate stalls, with their wives in a rather humiliating position beneath the great dead. Each is divided from its neighbor by a few wooden bars, and one couldn't but wonder whether the wasn't fortunate in the case of the French and German ambassadors, who by the accident of precedence sit side by side. On high court occasions such as this it has hitherto been the proud privilege—the particular chic, if one may use the word—of the American ambassador to be the only person present in evening dress, for Englishmen who are not entitled to wear any uniform wear court dress—a velvet coat and lace jabot round the neck.

The Privilege of Democracy.
But all privileges are disappearing, and even this, the privilege of democracy, is no longer unique, for the German ambassador also wears ordinary evening clothes today. In the past the German ambassador surpassed all his colleagues in the glory of his uniform and the glitter of his innumerable medals and stars. He is now reduced to the full dress uniform of the head waiter in a good hotel.

That is what we mean by progress. New the time approaches. The royal family arrives—the king, the queen, Queen Alexandra and her sister, the Empress Marie Frederica. The last, clothed in deep purple, bears herself with true majesty. She seems herself to represent in her single person all the Russia once stood for in the eyes of the world.

Then come the king's sons, sons of the king and queen, the other royals and clergy had taken their places, the soft, melodious tones of the invisible male choir, accompanied by the sonorous booming of the great organ flowed over the gathering, filling the vast abbey with moving cadences.

The bride in the simplest and daintiest gown probably ever made for a royal marriage, then moved slowly to the steps of the altar, the arm of her tall, courtly father, the Earl of Strathmore. She carried no bridal bouquet, having deposited it on the tomb of the unknown soldier. She was joined soon afterward by the bridegroom, who presented a striking figure in his blue uniform of the Royal Air Force, with the blue ribbon of the garter across his shoulder and a golden sword at his side. The six bridesmaids, two of whom are soon to become brides themselves, stood behind the couple, the ensemble presenting a delightful picture.

As the Duke and his bride joined hands, the sun, which had not revealed itself for several days, suddenly emerged from the mist, and its light, coming through the high, vaulted windows of the abbey, cast an effulgence upon the gallant Duke and his lovely bride and brought into bold relief the touches of gold, crimson and silver in the costumes of the brilliant assemblage of spectators.

The Duke stood fully a head taller than Lady Elizabeth, his erect, muscular frame and the ruddy glow of his countenance contrasting strongly with the delicate figure of his bride, whose robe of unrelieved white seemed to accentuate the paleness of her features.

After the archbishop of Canterbury had recited the usual ritual, the Duke placed the ring on the fourth finger of his bride's left hand, and in a reverent voice said: "With this ring I thee wed, with my body I thee worship and with all my worldly goods I thee endow." The archbishop then offered prayer, pronounced the couple man and wife and proclaimed to the vast congregation:

"Those whom God hath joined together, let no man put asunder." A Knelt at the Altar.

He added his blessing and the newly-married pair advanced inside the sanctuary and knelt at the altar while the choir sang Wesley's Chant. The service was concluded with a short prayer and benediction as the congregation knelt in silent devotion. The royal couple then repaired to the chapel of St. Edward and the confessor, where they signed the marriage register.

After signing the register, the Duke and Duchess were escorted by the clergy through the nave to the familiar accompaniment of Men-odors wedding march, and passed out to receive the plaudits of the waiting multitudes. Their return to Buckingham Palace through miles of cheering humanity was like a procession of triumph.

A wedding breakfast, presided over by the king and queen, was served in the state dining-room, and shortly after four o'clock the happy couple left for their honeymoon in Surrey.

that impulsive humanity that has so long endeared her to the hearts of the British public, cannot resist taking the young bridegroom's hand in her hands and kissing him upon both cheeks, and, of course, having done it to him, she had to do the same to the Prince of Wales.

The marriage service is just the ordinary marriage service. Nothing put in, nothing left out.

There is an address from the archbishop, which is not easy to hear in parts of the church, and then the side and bridegroom pass into the vestry to sign the register, accompanied by the King and Queen and the very few of the nearest relations.

Presently the radiant couple reappear, the familiar strains of the wedding march fill the church and they walk down the aisle followed by the King and Queen and the rest of the royal family, the Prince of Wales tenderly escorting Queen Alexandra. The procession has hardly passed before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

that impulsive humanity that has so long endeared her to the hearts of the British public, cannot resist taking the young bridegroom's hand in her hands and kissing him upon both cheeks, and, of course, having done it to him, she had to do the same to the Prince of Wales.

The marriage service is just the ordinary marriage service. Nothing put in, nothing left out.

There is an address from the archbishop, which is not easy to hear in parts of the church, and then the side and bridegroom pass into the vestry to sign the register, accompanied by the King and Queen and the very few of the nearest relations.

Presently the radiant couple reappear, the familiar strains of the wedding march fill the church and they walk down the aisle followed by the King and Queen and the rest of the royal family, the Prince of Wales tenderly escorting Queen Alexandra. The procession has hardly passed before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

that impulsive humanity that has so long endeared her to the hearts of the British public, cannot resist taking the young bridegroom's hand in her hands and kissing him upon both cheeks, and, of course, having done it to him, she had to do the same to the Prince of Wales.

The marriage service is just the ordinary marriage service. Nothing put in, nothing left out.

There is an address from the archbishop, which is not easy to hear in parts of the church, and then the side and bridegroom pass into the vestry to sign the register, accompanied by the King and Queen and the very few of the nearest relations.

Presently the radiant couple reappear, the familiar strains of the wedding march fill the church and they walk down the aisle followed by the King and Queen and the rest of the royal family, the Prince of Wales tenderly escorting Queen Alexandra. The procession has hardly passed before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

(Copyright, 1923, in United States and Great Britain by North American Newspaper Alliance. All rights reserved.)

Before we slip out of the north door near which we are seated, and are in time to see the bride and bridegroom who have left by the west door, driving away.

We catch one last glimpse of their two happy faces and in our hearts we hear the great roar of welcome from London which has been waiting for hours to give them the greeting that they deserve.

NICOLET BY-ELECTION WILL BE HELD MAY 28

Canadian Press Despatch.
Ottawa, April 27.—The by-election in Nicolet County, necessitated by the elevation of Arthur Trahan, the sitting member, to the Montreal bench, will take place on May 28. Nominations will be on May 14. A writ for the by-election was issued yesterday morning.

TOMORROW WILL BE A BIG DAY HERE

THE VALUES we are giving in clothing this spring are helping everybody—Helping men and young men to get new clothes of extra quality at appreciable savings. Our idea is that by giving you a saving it's going to help all around. If you measure it by the size of the saving you're getting it's a big idea.

Young Men's Suits On Sale Tomorrow, $29.50

You are getting more quality as well as new style in these Young Men's Suits. Conditions have made it possible for us to insist on better materials and better workmanship—and get it. All of these suits are of very fine textures and tailoring quality, and you are getting a lot of inside quality that you can't see. The models are especially designed to meet the tastes and requirements of young men. Specially priced tomorrow..... $29.50