Spooky The Screech Owl Finds Cubby Apartment To Fit

By THORNTON W. BURGESS.

Do you know that there are apartments in the Green Forest? There are. There are regular apartments in the Green Forest. As a rule they are not as popular as single homes. But once in a while they are very handy. Now, though Peter Rabbit didn't know it, Mrs. Timmy the Flying Squirrel had moved her family into an apartment tree. It was a ready furnished apartment she had taken. Ready furnished apartments are very handy when you must move in a hurry, and have no chance to furnish the apartment yourself.

Of course the furnishings of that apartment were very simple. A Squirrel's tastes are simple. All they require is a properly made soft bed. The bed in this apartment had been made by Timmy himself some time before. It was old, but it was soft and good. So Timmy's family was quite as well off as before, excepting that there were nearer neighbors than Mrs. Timmy Green Forest. A little below and part way around the trunk of that tree, was another home. It was the home of Drummer the Woodpecker, and in it were four young Woodpeckers, and it was Timmy's job to get some sleep that first day, that those young Woodpeckers down below her were crying for food all day long. They got on Mrs. Timmy's nerves, but there really wasn't a thing she could do about it.

In another hollow still further down in that same tree, and around on the opposite side, was another home. It was the home of Mr. and Mrs. Whitefoot the Wood Mice. They had been the first tenants that year. They had moved in in the winter. Drummer the Woodpecker and Mrs. Drummer had moved in in the spring, after completing their apartment to suit themselves. About half way up that tree, which you know is a dead tree, was a large apartment which had been unoccupied for a long time. The entrance was too large to be attractive to most people using hollow-tree apartments. But unknown to the other tenants in the apartment tree, someone had moved apartment tree, someone had moved very early in the morning of the day that Mrs. Timmy had moved her family. None of the other tenants were awake at the time, and none knew that Spooky the Screech Owl was a very close neighbor. He had come over there from the Old Orchard, having been crowded out by the family which Mrs. Spooky had raised in his old home. He hadn't been able to find another satisfactory house in the Old Orchard, and so had flown over to the Green Forest. He had moved in at once when he discovered this particular house. As he said, it was just his size. And when he moved in he hadn't known that there were any other tenants in that apartment tree. Now there were four occupied apartments in that apartment tree, and of the four families just one was awake during the day. The family of Drummer the Woodpecker awoke at the very beginning of daylight, just at the time when the other tenants were going to bed, and the Woodpeckers went to bed just when the other tenants were starting out. So the Woodpeckers rarely saw anything of the others, and the others had only glimpses of the Woodpeckers. In fact, Spooky the Screech Owl had lived in that tree a week before he knew that the Woodpeckers were there.
