Show Vastness of WorkVICE-PRESIDENT'S NOTES
Mrs. Gordon Wright, London
Delegate, Comments on Annual

Interesting after-glances of the recent annual meeting of the National Council of Women, in Port Arthur, are given in a letter received in town yesterday, from Mrs. Gordon Wright, who as delegate from the London Local Council, has brought home to her home city in her election to the National Vice-presidency.

Commenting on the convention, Mrs. Wright says:

"The reports showed a spirit of comprehension of the vastness of the task imposed, and in many instances told of great accomplishment. The report on housing conditions, given by Mrs. Bundy of Toronto, was a most thorough resume of conditions in different cities. Mrs. Bundy stated that the house shortage in Toronto amounted to 10,000. Montreal has a house shortage of 25,000, while Winnipeg reported a shortage of 5,400. Assuredly, in Canada, had housing been responsible for several thousand deaths each year, and a large proportion of deaths among children might be prevented if better housing conditions prevailed. It was also reported that some 2,000 cases of white slave traffic were brought to the notice of the Council last year.

"Infant mortality is always lessened through careful town planning. Mrs. Bundy stated, and added that Saskatchewan has one of the best town planning acts in the world.

GIFT TO PRESIDENT. Mrs. Wright's letter on "was the presentation made to Mrs. W. E. Sanford, the honored retiring president. This took the form of an exquisite gold pin, while the other provincial presidents came forward with appreciative tributes to Mrs. Sanford, expressive of their affection and loyalty. Mrs. Sanford replied in most fitting and gracious terms.

"The luncheon speeches," the London delegate reported, "were of all a very fine order. Outstanding were those from Miss Loring, the young Canadian sculptor, and Miss Lucy Doyle, president of the Canadian Women's Press Club. Miss Doyle aptly stated that every time a Canadian goes into a bookstore and buys a Canadian book he is helping to build up Canadian literature. Readers are needed before a great book can emerge."

Mrs. Wright pays a warm tribute to Miss C. B. Carmichael, the new National president. "From her early girlhood she has been a large-hearted, public-spirited citizen," she writes. "At the outbreak of the war she was elected to the presidency of the New Glasgow Red Cross Society, a post she held continuously until the end of the war. In 1921 was awarded a medal by the King of the Belgians, in recognition of her services for Belgium. She is also an associate member of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem, an honor conferred on her in 1911.

IDEAL CONDITIONS. "Perhaps seldom has the National Council foregathered under more auspicious circumstances," is Mrs. Wright's comment on the setting of the annual. "Our meeting place, the twin cities of Port Arthur and Fort William, is ideal for a great national gathering, situated in the heart of the continent and at the world's greatest inland waterway, a most strategic center, at which, as Mayor Matthews, of Port Arthur stated, they may interpret the East to the West, and the West to the East, that in spirit an essence they may be one.

"Never were kinder or more thoughtful hostesses," the new vice-president concluded. "Everything that could be done was done for the delegates, with all the extras of motor rides, boat trips and delightful luncheons."

Although the national annual meeting concluded this week, Mrs. Wright will not return to London immediately, going on with her husband into Northern Ontario, where they will be guests at the country home of their son, Major Ward Wright, at Edgewater, Lake Temiskaming, and their sons, Douglas and John Wright, at Cobalt.

"The Mystery Of the Four Winds"

BY STUART MARTIN.

Published by arrangement with Dominion News Bureau, Limited.

In a short time Forster was sitting in the private room of the surgeon. Bloom by name—telling the story and giving what details the host asked. He was perfectly frank in the matter, for there was no reason why he should conceal anything from the man who had probably saved his life. The swift surgery had arrested the work of the poison, and beyond a sore neck and a few bruises was little the worse of his adventure. It was true he had a few bruises here and there, but these were minor matters.

After breakfast he borrowed a cap from Bloom and they made their way to Coulton. Bloom had a morning off duty and had become interested in the adventure, and offered many valuable suggestions. Forster, however, did not tell too much. He kept his remarks on the adventure and the suspicions he had as regards the death of James Barron. He mentioned Hughes' name casually.

At Coulton post office they discovered that the telegram had been sent off the previous day, but the clerk was not quite sure of the sender. She thought it was a shabby kind of individual who sent it, so far as her recollection went, but she had been busy at the time and took little notice of him.

"One can't notice everyone who comes into the office," she explained. "From Coulton the two doctors returned to the hospital. There Forster announced that he must return to Four Winds as soon as possible and he took leave of the surgeon after thanking him gratefully for his attention and kindness."

"But don't forget to let me know how you get on," was the latter's parting words. "I am mightily interested in what you have told me, and if ever I can be of any use, you have but to call for me. I was indebted to you for your papers on medical things when I went to Bart's—especially the researches you made in toxicology. I have kept a slide of your blood and intend to work out some sort of basis. I'll let you know the result."

"Thanks, and I intend to do the same. In the meantime, however, silence is the best weapon we can use."

"I will observe strict secrecy," Forster walked back to Leeds. He made some purchases—a new hat and collar and tie—and posted Bloom's cap back to the surgeon. Then he went to the station to inquire about his train back to Four Winds.

He had not long to wait, and as he lay back in his corner seat he began to review the situation. He was sure his ears had not played him false on the previous night. At any rate, it was not Hughes' voice which had broken into his slumbering brain, it was his double in that respect.

"I'll act as if it was Hughes," he murmured. "The onus is no longer on me to prove him guilty of that outrage. He has to prove himself innocent."

At Ripon he changed trains. Walking up and down the platform he passed close to the refreshment bar several times. Once he raised his eyes from the ground and looked casually at the window of the saloon. What he saw made him start.

A face he knew well was watching him over the stained portion of the window. The lower features were hidden by the opaque portion of the glass, but in the eyes and upper features he recognized the face of Will Hughes, the man sympathy. Modern sympathy goes out to Becky Sharpe, who may have been weeping.

The old poem says that "Women must weep." I wonder why? Sometimes, of course, it can't be helped. It's an emotional safety valve. But I wonder why so many women weep for no special reason at all, or perhaps only for the inadequate reason that they are in a bad temper or can't have their own way.

There is nothing in the world that makes a woman so old as weeping. It hurts the eyes, makes the nose red, drags down the mouth, makes her look temporarily old. It's a bad habit, as bad as continual temper over nothing.

Fortunately the "cry-baby" type of woman is passing. Thackeray's Amelia in "Vanity Fair" must have been a popular type in her day, for the great writer would not have made her his heroine. But Amelia's continual reticence to corners to weep her heart out must have been as hard on her complexion as on the tempers of her friends. Nowadays, at least, she would get little

TENNIS TEA FOR NEW
CLUB AT Y. W. COURTSMany Members Registered for Summer
Program of Physical Committee

The members of the Girls' Tennis Club, recently organized by the Y. W. C. A. physical education committee, spent a happy afternoon yesterday at the Wellington street residence courts as the tea guests of the committee.

Games were played during the late afternoon and early evening, under the supervision of Miss Edith Wynne-Pryce, the players making a pretty picture in their summer frocks and gay sweaters.

Tea was served on the wide vine-bordered veranda of the residence, where Mrs. Gordon Philip, convener of the committee, was assisted in looking after the girls by several of the committee members, who include Mrs. Sherwood Fox, Mrs. H. W. Fiddell, Mrs. Charles Glass, Miss McColl, Miss Eula White and Mrs. Eric Reid. Miss Helen Sutherland added a word of welcome.

Club members who have registered are the Misses Gwen Harris, E. Lowry, Florence Hurley, Carmen Farrow, Gertrude Lockwood, Thompson, Beattie, Gladys Harvey, H. Burgess, L. Davidson, Wilson, M. Beckett, Gladys Baldwin, Edna Boomer, Phyllis Johnston, Allie York, Gladys Hynd, Joyce Gibberd, Swallow, Stella Benson, Laila Meadows, Beatrice Hutchinson and Mrs. Walkers. Others who will join the club are Miss Whittaker, Miss Sadie Hardy, Miss Mabel Thomas and Mrs. Renne.

GIFT TO PASTOR.

Rev. H. Mrs. Williams and family were greatly surprised when a large party of their Grove friends visited them recently.

After playing games on the spacious lawn the young people of the church joined their elders inside and a very informal and pleasant evening was spent, during which musical and vocal selections were given and enthusiastically received. An orchestra, composed of several of the younger members of the church, rendered pleasing and appropriate music.

To show the great esteem in which Mr. and Mrs. Williams are held, and to express their sorrow and regret felt at their departure for the former's new church at Ripley, the members of the Grove church presented them with a handsome china set. After the presentation Mr. Williams expressed his appreciation of the gift and of the kindness of the Grove members to him and his family during his connection with the church.

TILLSONBURG AT HOME
The at home held at the residence of Mrs. Joel Tillsonburg, under the auspices of the W. M. S. of the Methodist church, was a very successful event.

Mrs. J. J. Poles, of Salford, presiding, the program of the evening was a very excellent address on "Love, Prayer and Service," which was both inspiring and profitable, and Mrs. Bate gave a report of the branch meeting held recently at Kitchener. During the program Mrs. George Rogers, who is returning to Ridgeway, and who is a very active worker in the society, was presented with a handsomely bound hymn book. Mrs. Rogers made a brief reply, after which the company of 45 joined hands and sang "Blest Be the Tie That Binds." After the program refreshments were served. As this was membership day, a goodly number of new and several of the ladies joined the society as new members.

GROVE W. M. S.
Miss Maynard was a gracious hostess to the members of the Grove W. M. S. at their June meeting, her home being beautifully decorated with roses and peonies for the occasion. The members of the society were intensely interested in an instructive talk on "African Missions" by Miss Copeland of Lambeth, who illustrated her talk by reference to a map of that continent.

After a brief program Mrs. H. Williams was made the recipient of a beautiful bouquet of roses, conveying the club's regret at her departure to Ripley, where Rev. H. Williams will take up his new ministerial duties.

Mrs. Mudge, who is leaving for her former home in England early in July, was presented with a certificate of appreciation, showing the esteem in which she is held by all the members.

At the close of the meeting a very enjoyable social hour was spent with the girls of the church assisting the hostess in serving tea.
