A discussion took place in connection with the use of maps, a number of the teachers taking part. The usefulness of maps in holding the attention of the pupils and impressing the work on the minds of the pupils was shown. The drawing of a map should be a part of every lesson. A good number of up-todate maps should be in every school. These should be in constant use, not only in the geography lesson, but also in the history lesson.

Miss Hill read a paper in connection with primary work. Experience in many cases tells us how to overcome the many cases tells us now to overcome the difficulties. Pupils should be given as many opportunities as possible to express themselves in words and actions. The first days in school are very important. Talks about homelife good to start pupils with. The blackboard should be continually used. Use the blackboard to teach coalling.

spelling.
The Thursday afternoon session was opened by Rev. Mr. Bingham, pastor of the Baptist church.

the Baptist church.

R. J. Blake, the president, discussed the Ideal Teacher. A perfect teacher should possess tact, be a good disciplanian and love children. A teacher should be attractive in manner, appearance, voice and dress. Teachers should be honest in all their dealings. Good nature and patience are needed every minute in the school room.

and patience are needed every minute in the school room.

The reading problem in the Public school was well handled by Mr. McCut-cheon. The child is now being recog-nized more truly and in a more just mannized more truly and in a more just manner than ever before. The supreme thing in education is "How well you may be able to train the child." The results to be obtained from a reading lesson are to obtain thought from the lesson and to give it accurate vocal expression. A child should be able to recognize the words before he is allowed to read about words before he is allowed to read aloud Good reading can only come from good understanding and an accurate knowledge of the pronounciation of the words should have a definite clear-cut standard in reading.

Miss Matthews and Miss Carr dealt with the use of the history readers. An essay to fix the facts in the minds can be used with good effect. A story given orally and headings placed on the board arc successfully used. Questions placed on the board and the answers written both in the books and on the board are both in the books and on the board are helpful. The meanings and pronouncia-tions of the words should be taken before the lesson is read. A summary should be left on the board at the end of each

Mr. McCutcheon, Inspector County of West Lambton, Inspector McDougall, of East Lambton, spoke on Education, ask-ing for a closer co-operation between teacher and parent, and a greater interest in school work to be taken by those in

Mr. Peter McArthur, the talented jour-Mr. Peter McArthur, the talented journalist, held the close attention of the audience while he spoke about Near to Nature. Selections well chosen from his numerous writings were read. What a wonderful thing it would be if we could get the pupils to see the world of nature unfold itself as laid before us by Mr. McArthur. There are many things in nature Arthur. There are many things in nature that cannot be told in words. A farmer leads a double life with nature with his fellow man. Nature forces men to be on

Two chorus by children, under the direction of Mr. McDougall, and solos by Miss Jennings and Mr. McDougall, with Miss McAlpine, as accompanist, helped to make the evening a most enjoyable

Rev. Dr. McNair, pastor of the Presby-terian church, opened the meeting on Friday morning.

The report of the Nominating Com-mittee as follows was adopted:—

Meyew Committee was also touched on by him.

Miss Reid dealt very fully with the books a teacher should read. A list was placed on the board and a full statement of the use of each was read. These books fill one of three purposes, entertainment or general culture or special culture. Many of these books are good not only for the teacher but also for the not only for the teacher but also for Literature, as useful in the Junior Trade, was next taken by Mr. McCutcheon. Literature makes immortal all that's best and purest of life. It preserves the ideals of the people. The power of being able to read literature admits us into this great field full of thoughts, noble and powerful. Little children enjoy the reading of great works and have the level of their whole moral character lifted. Don't attach a sermon at the end of each literature lesson. Literature, as useful in the Junior

Mr. Henderson and Miss Morris dealt with Mental Arithmetic and Solutions. Catch questions have been replaced by Catch questions have been replaced by thought questions. Mechanical arithmetic has crept in when pupils look back to see what old question, similar in form, has been done. Mental arithmetic leads of the property of the pro pupils to see easy ways of doing arithmetic. Many solutions were shown and the difficulty with each pointed out.

Inspector McDougall read a paper on the training of teachers. The pupil's power of doing in school and in life lose very much from both the untrained and unperfectively trained teachers. unperfectivelo trained teaches. Every en-couragement should be given those who couragement should be given those who have taught a number of years to attain a first-class certificate. A break between the two terms of training would benefit the teacher in training and keep the teachers at least two years.

The afternoon westing was opened

The afternoon meeting was opened with the devotional exercises in charge of Rev. Mr. Hill, pastor of the English church.

Composition was made a very interest ng study under the direction of Mr Ing study under the direction of Mr.
McCutcheon. To make every child a master of good English is the supreme aim. All the subjects and routine of school life give a chance for the practice of good English. English should occupy the first position in school life.
Train the child to narrate in a concise way some of his actual experiences. way some of his actual experiences. Teachers' language should be a model in good English. A hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speaker for his able addresses.

Misses McDonald and McPherson,
Mrs. McLean and Mr. Rush explained how they conducted their school gardens, Valuable suggestions on what to grow and how to grow the different vegetables and flowers were given. As these teachers all had good gardens, their advice was practical and interesting. Inspector McDougall mentioned that
