OBITUARY: E. JONES.

EDWARD JONES, B. A., born at Aberystwyth, Wales, 25 Dec., 1823, died near Liverpool, 17 Sep., 1908. At 22 he enterd Boro' Road Training College, London. At 24 he taut a colliery scool at Blaena. His energy in his work secured government encuragement and salary dubld to £200 a year. Next he is master of the Hibernian Scool at Liverpool. He marid a sister of Sir I. Pitman. Ther survives a second wife, most activ of late years to help along his work for temperance, as a poor-law gardian and political liberal, and, more especialy for us, his untiring advocacy of orderly orthografy—Max Müller calld him "speling Jones." This many-sided man's interest in this was due to the eas with which reading of Welsh (compared with English) is acquired, to his teaching experience and to his contact with Pitmans. From his pen came Common Sense of English Orthografy, Esentials of Speling, the Place of Welsh in Aryan Family of Languages and endles pamflets, letters, articls. In 1876 he atended the Sp. Ref'm Conference at Philadelfia and was secretary of a like one at London in 1877. To the end he held to old-letter schemes, favord a government inquiry (presumably joint British-American), but never realizing the mountain of prejudice and ignorance needing removal before slo and timid officialdom dares lay hands on the orthografic deity that English peple worship and fear. Presnt agitation results from work by many. In it he had a large part. Gratified by this, he longd to see more done in England. This the SSSociety just formd in London promises, H. DRUMMOND.

SETLMENT OF NOVA SCOTIA.

like atempts in Virginia then. Argall's expedition from Virginia destroyd Port Royal in 1613. It was partly restored and remaind under French influence til captured by Nicholson, 1710, named Annapolis, and ceded to Britan by Treaty of Uttrecht in 1713.

1714, Luisburg founded; after 1720 for several years it was made a strong fortres.

1745, Luisburg taken by Pepperel's expedition from Masachusets (Gov. Shirley), 1748, Luisburg rebilt by France.

1749, Halifax founded by Cornwallis.

1755, of an Acadian population of about 10,000, some 6000 wer actualy deported; 1000 remaind in forests and southwestern coast; 3000 went to east New Brunswic, and apear to hav extended over northern New Brunswic. The total French population reacht 30,000 in 1890. About 12,000 of them ar desendants of Acadians; 18,000 ar of other French origin.

1760 on, pre-loyalist setlers from Masachusets to present counties of Annapolis, Queens, Shelburn, Yarmuth, Cumberland and Colchester, especialy in the beutiful townships of Cornwallis and Horton where Acadian medos wer richest. Others setle at Maugervil and other places on St John river, now Sunbury county. Sakvil township was setled from Rhode Iland.

1767, total population of what is now N. Brunswic, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Iland was 13,374, of whom 6913 wer Americans, 912 English, 1946 Germans, 1265 Acadian French (a lo estimat), 2165 Irish Presbyterians bro't out by Alex. McNutt, some from New Hampshir. Ther is a Londonderry in New Hampshir, in Colchester co., N. S., and in Kings co., N. B. A few others of this clas went to Windsor, Amherst and Wilmot.

1784, population 43,000, of whom 28,000 wer "new inhabitants" (loyalists and disbanded troops). "The old British inhabitants," (the imigration before 1783), ar givn at 14,000. Only 400 wer Acadian French. Of loyalists nearly 10,000 setld on St John river, 8000 in Shelburn co. With them wer some Negro slaves, most of whom wer deported to Africa later. Desendants of the remnant drifted to Halifax mainly.
