

10. Calpurnius.—Quintus Calpurnius Crispus.
 A man of great wealth, he was the son of a slave. He was educated at Rome, and became a member of the Senate. He was a friend of the Emperor Nero, and was appointed to various important posts. He was accused of being a conspirator against the Emperor, and was condemned to death. He was executed in 65 A.D.

11. Galba.—Cnaeus Galba.
 A man of moderate means, he was born in Hispania. He was a soldier, and rose through the ranks to become a general. He was appointed to the command of the legions in Hispania, and was successful in his military career. He was elected to the Senate, and became a member of the Senate. He was a friend of the Emperor Nero, and was appointed to various important posts. He was accused of being a conspirator against the Emperor, and was condemned to death. He was executed in 65 A.D.

12. Vitellius.—Cnaeus Vitellius.
 A man of moderate means, he was born in Hispania. He was a soldier, and rose through the ranks to become a general. He was appointed to the command of the legions in Hispania, and was successful in his military career. He was elected to the Senate, and became a member of the Senate. He was a friend of the Emperor Nero, and was appointed to various important posts. He was accused of being a conspirator against the Emperor, and was condemned to death. He was executed in 65 A.D.