For the information of members, and for persons desirous of becoming members of the Canadian Institute, we subjoin a few extracts from the Regulations and Circulars which have been published by the Council.

1. The Canadian Institute has been established by Royal Charter, for the purpose of promoting the physical sciences, for encouraging and advancing the industrial arts and manufactures, for effecting the formation of a Provincial Museum, and for the purpose of facilitating the acquirement and the dissemination of knowledge connected with the Surveying, Engineering and Architectural Professions.

2. There are three classes of persons who may, with propriety, join the Institute. 1st. Those who, by their attainments, researches, or discoveries, can promote its objects, by their union of labour, the weight of their support, and the aid of their experience. 2nd. Those who may reasonably expect to derive some share of instruction from the publication of its proceedings by the Journal (which will be furnished to members of the Canadian Institute without charge,) and an acquaintance with the improvement in Art and the rapid progress of Science in all countries—a marked feature of the present generation. 3rd. Those who, although they may neither have time for, nor opportunity of contributing much information, may yet have an ardent desire to countenance a laudable, and, to say the least, a patriotic undertaking,—a wish to encourage a Society where men of all shades of religion or politics may meet on the same friendly grounds; nothing more being required of the members of the Canadian Institute than the means, the opportunity, or the disposition, to promote those pursuits which are calculated to refine and exalt a people.

3. The first contribution of each member shall be the sum of one pound. The following annual contribution of each member shall be fifteen shillings. The first contribution of each shall be payable at the time of his election, and the second shall become
