

Finally, at the regional level, the Caribbean Regional Oceans and Fisheries Program is an example of CIDA's assistance in programming for the "sustainable management of environmental and natural resources." This project aims at capacity development in sustainable management and conservation of fishery and ocean resources of Caribbean Commonwealth countries. The project supports the creation of resource information systems, fisheries management information systems, a regional fisheries management system, and strengthened fisheries management institutions.