

thames to one of the Canadian delegates. I learned some time ago of the probable persons from other countries, and formed the men that, as you say, this was a trip I should take.

You had promised to write me, & regrets that your journey might be long.
This report rather corroborates your previous statement to me, and I am hoping that perhaps you have been prevailed upon to change your mind. I would stop only that of murder, to be with you.