

	PAGE
by the Jewish tribe of Kainoka.—A tumult.—The Beni Kainoka take refuge in their castle.—Subdued and punished by confiscation and banishment.—Marriage of Othman to the prophet's daughter Omm Kalthum, and of the prophet to Hafsa,	39
CHAPTER XX.
Henda incites Abu Sofian and the Koreishites to revenge the death of her relations slain in the battle of Beder.—The Koreishites sally forth, followed by Henda and her female companions.—Battle of Ohod.—Feroocious triumph of Henda.—Mahomet consoles himself by marrying Henda, the daughter of Omeya,	40
CHAPTER XXI.
Treachery of certain Jewish tribes; their punishment.—Devotion of the prophet's freedman Zeid; divorces his beautiful wife Zeinab, that she may become the wife of the prophet,	41
CHAPTER XXII.
Expedition of Mahomet against the Beni Mosalek.—He espouses Barra, a captive.—Treachery of Abdallah Ibn Obba.—Aysha slandered.—Her vindication.—Her innocence proved by a revelation,	43
CHAPTER XXIII.
The battle of the Moat.—Bravery of Saad Ibn Moad.—Defeat of the Koreishites.—Capture of the Jewish castle of Koraida.—Saad decides as to the punishment of the Jews.—Mahomet espouses Rehana, a Jewish captive.—His life endangered by sorcery; saved by a revelation of the angel Gabriel,	44
CHAPTER XXIV.
Mahomet undertakes a pilgrimage to Mecca.—Evades Khaled and a troop of horse sent against him.—Encamps near Mecca.—Negotiates with the Koreishites for permission to enter and complete his pilgrimage.—Treaty for ten years, by which he is permitted to make a yearly visit of three days.—He returns to Medina,	46
CHAPTER XXV.
Expedition against the city of Khaibar; siege.—Exploits of Mahomet's captains.—Battle of Ali and Marhab.—Storming of the citadel.—Ali makes a buckler of the gate.—Capture of the place.—Mahomet poisoned; he marries Satiya, a captive; also Omm Habiba, a widow,	47
CHAPTER XXVI.
Missions to various princes; to Heraclius; to Khosru II.; to the Prefect of Egypt.—Their result,	49
CHAPTER XXVII.
Mahomet's pilgrimage to Mecca; his marriage with Maimuna.—Khaled Ibn al Waled and Amru Ibn al Aass become proselytes,	50
CHAPTER XXVIII.
A Moslem envoy slain in Syria.—Expedition to avenge his death.—Battle of Muta.—Its results,	50
CHAPTER XXIX.
Designs upon Mecca.—Mission of Abu Sofian.—Its result,	51
CHAPTER XXX.
Surprise and capture of Mecca,
CHAPTER XXXI.
Hostilities in the mountains.—Enemy's camp in the valley of Autas.—Battle at the pass of Hunein.—Capture of the enemy's camp.—Interview of Mahomet with the nurse of his childhood.—Division of spoil.—Mahomet at his mother's grave, CHAPTER XXXII.
Death of the prophet's daughter Zeinab.—Birth of his son Ibrahim.—Deputations from distant tribes.—Poetical contest in presence of the prophet.—His susceptibility to the charms of poetry.—Reduction of the city of Tayef; destruction of its idols.—Negotiation with Amru Ibn Tafel, a proud Bedouin chief; independent spirit of the latter.—Interview of Amru and other chief, with Mahomet, CHAPTER XXXIII.
Preparations for an expedition against Syria.—Intrigues of Abdallah Ibn Obba.—Contributions of the faithful.—March of the army.—The accursed region of Hajar.—Encampment at Tabuc.—Subjugation of the neighboring provinces.—Khaled surprises Okaidor and his castle.—Return of the army to Medina, CHAPTER XXXIV.
Triumphal entry into Medina.—Punishment of those who had refused to join the campaign.—Effects of excommunication.—Death of Abdallah Ibn Obba.—Dissensions in the prophet's harem, CHAPTER XXXV.
Abu Beker conducts the yearly pilgrimage to Mecca.—Mission of Ali to announce a revelation, CHAPTER XXXVI.
Mahomet sends his captains on distant enterprises.—Appoints lieutenants to govern in Arabia Felix.—Sends Ali to suppress an insurrection in that province.—Death of the prophet's only son Ibrahim.—His conduct at the death-bed and the grave.—His growing intimacies.—His valedictory pilgrimage to Mecca, and his conduct and preaching while there,
CHAPTER XXXVII.
Of the two false prophets Al Aswad and Moseflma,
CHAPTER XXXVIII.
An army prepared to march against Syria.—Command given to Osama.—The prophet's farewell address to the troops.—His last illness.—His sermons in the mosque.—His death and the attending circumstances, CHAPTER XXXIX.
Person and character of Mahomet, and speculations on his prophetic career,
APPENDIX.
Of the Islam Faith,	