

rently beneath the sterno-mastoid muscle. This was removed on October 13th ; three small-sized glands were removed with ease without disruption of their capsule, and in each instance the gland was found in a condition of caseation. Recovery in this instance was rapid ; the wound closed in the course of ten days. I met this gentleman during the early part of the present month, August, 1886. He is robust and healthy in appearance, and the two scars in his neck are so indistinct that they would be readily passed over by a casual observer.

CASE II—March, 1874.—This was a young woman, aged 27. She had a glandular growth situated near the angle of the jaw on the right side. Had been under treatment for several months. The iodide of lead ointment had been used, and other internal remedies. She was pale, thin, and with a phthisical family history, her mother, a sister and a brother having died of phthisis. She consulted me in regard to the tumor, which was most unsightly. I advised its removal, and the operation was done on the 23rd March following. A single straight incision was made and three distinct glandular masses, softened and breaking down, were removed. A portion of the skin over the growth, which had thickened and was adherent, had to be taken away. Recovery was rapid. Six months after the removal this patient had greatly improved in personal appearance, and a very slight whitish scar was visible, but it was soft and non-adherent to the deeper parts.

CASE III.—M. R., aged 20, admitted into the Montreal General Hospital in April, 1883. This patient had been operated on before, and several glands removed from the upper part of the neck. There was a chain of glands, enlarged, extending down almost to the clavicle ; two at the upper part, a little below the angle of the jaw, had suppurated, and several sinuses led into a lot of gland tissue, which was disintegrating and discharging. This gave her great annoyance, and had a marked effect on her general health. She was pale, anæmic in appearance, had a very anxious, troubled look, and was very much depressed in spirits. I recommended their removal, and she willingly consented. The operation was performed on the 25th April. An
