There is one thing The World has always asisted upon in regard to the public affairs

The English Liberals chose a FrenchCanadian as their leader, and he thankéd them for their liberality, but from the moment of the arrival of Sir Wilfrid to power The Toronto Mail began a disloyal war on the French race. Mr.
Tarte here read an extract from The Toronto Evening News, which, he said, was the evening edition of the Conservative organ, saying that the eyes of the people of Ontario were wakening to the real character of the movement among the French-Canadians; that it might be necessary to take away the rights guaranteed to them by the treaty of Paris; that if the ballot-box was not sufficient the people of Ontario had other means of ridding themselves of the domination of an inferior race.

on Oct. 20 last, retorted with much point and reason to this effect:

We know that the Conservatives of the sister province can be depended upon, but the position of The Toronto News is a strange one. It would make little difference if The News was an isolated sheet, but it is the evening edition of The Mail and Empire, and the antecedents of that gaper are well known. It was formerly the organ of the Conservative party, but Mr. Bunting having had an attack of Francophobia, he was repudiated by Sir John Macdonald, who remained faithful to his allies from this province. Mr. Riordan, however, who is the present proprietor of The Mail and Empire, always stuck to Mr. Bunting and supplied the funds. It is, therefore, strange to see Messrs. Riordan and Douglass accusing French-Canadians of disloyalty, when this same Mail newspaper was the chief promoter of the policy of commercial union with the United States, and even the annexation cry in the paimy days of Wiman and his anti-British campaign. At that time The Mail sent an agent to New York with the object of becoming the chief factor in that movement, and The Mail's words, "So much the worse for British connection," are not forgotten in loyal Quebec. It is no more than right that we should bring those things home to our insulters of to-day and it is also well that the Conservatives of Ontario should understand that we do not refer to those men who form the greater portion of the party.

The people of Ontario, as a province, and the people of Ontario who are Conserva-

The people of Ontario, as a province, and the people of Ontario who are Conservatives will, we imagine, resent the two-faced conduct of The Mail management and refuse to be responsible therefor. Nobody wants to be responsible therefor. Noted man or a two-faced paper. Nor is there any forgiveness for the disloyalty of The Mail in former days. It can never hide from the sight or memory of Canadians its disloyalty to Sir John Macdonald, and its advocacy with 'Ras Wiman of commercial union and even annexation, by charging disloyalty against the French-Canadians of Quebec!
