One old fisherman states that it is about twenty years since he saw such a condition as that in existence at the present time. He was at Port Burwell at the time, and he found it necessary to go several miles inland to cut ice on the creek with which to supply the demands of the fishermen in his locality.

demands of the fishermen in his locality.

PRICE UNCERTAINTY IS

HINDERING THE DEMAND

London reports to Bradstreet's that price uncertainty is the chief obstacle in the way of a heavy demand for merchandise. Merchants are inclined to be conservative in the way of purchases for future requirements, and mild weather has resulted in dull trading in winter clothes. Livestock prices are inclined to be easier and quotations on hogs are lower than for some time past. Offerings of butter and eggs, particularly the latter, are increasing, and prices show marked recessions. The grain trade in this district is very dull, offerings being light and grain hard to sell.

In old Russia—that is imperial Russia—every adult was a soldier. From revolution days it has been the rule that army and navy should be purely volunteers. The Russian troops now in Viaditors the Czechs defeated the Bolsheviki in the town. The vessels in the harbor are manned by volunteers. Incidentally there appears to be a very decided public sentiment, as well as with the aberrations of Gen. Semienov, the Allies have not actively concerned themselves, both being matters for the Russian troops now in Viaditors the rule that army and navy should be purely volunteers. ling with the soldiers of every land. The Siberian Cossack may be easily distinguished from other tribes of Cossacks from the fact that he wears a yellow band down the side of his breeches. There are mainy varieties of Cossack, and each variety has its distinctive trousers band. A police reporter in Vladivostok might draw attention to the fact that Cossacks and Russian volunteer sailors do not agree very well. When a band of sailors falls in at night with a group of Cossacks on the street there is sure to be a fight. This may be because the sailors are all Kolchak men, or it may be that both parties dearly love to "mix it."

ONE FAMILY HAS LOST

FIVE FROM PNEUMONIA was the first white woman to be born in the township of Eastnor. In six weeks five in the one family have succumbed to this disease. Before being taken ill she had been nursing her brother and three of his children, all of whom died. She is a sister of S. Slack of Hope Bay, Ont.
