The return league game between the Pats and the Gunners was played on Carling Heights last night in rather varm weather, which made the game uninteresting at times. The "Emma Gees" took the field with only nine men, and still played hard enough to keep the Pats from scoring. One of the Emma Gees' players got injured during this period, and notwithstanding the fact that they played with only eight men in the second period, their one-back game and open play kept the Tecumsehites puzzled appertaining to ocating their opponents' net, and when time was called the game ended scoreless, each team thereby gaining one point in the league table.
