SAYS CANADA SPASMODIC IN PATRIOTIC ENDEAVORS

Fervid. Then Luke-warm. Says C. n. Hodgins—Advocate Military Training for Every Male Citizen

(Ottawa Journal-Press).
"I believe in military training for every male citizen," declared Gen. W. E. Hodgins, in an address on "Patriotism" before the Women's Canadian Club in the Collegiate Hall, Tuesday evening.

Such training, according to the theory of General Hodgins, would foster real patriotism, a social consciousness, and provide the essential discipline which tends to raise citizenship to its highest efficiency, and greatest strength.

"Canada is in need of the homely every-day patriotism," continued the speaker. "She must raise the standard of her citizenship, fill private interests are submerged in the common welfare."

"Patriotism today is spasmodic. Sometimes it is latent, and the fiercest of human passions. As a people we are devoid of historical conscience. We are behind the French, the Germans, and the Americans in our appreciation of the meaning of the Empire and the state."

"We must follow their lead and inculcate in our boys in school the duties of citizenship, the working of government and their relation to it."

"Patriotism, that spirit in a people which gives obedience to its country's laws, and protection to its institutions, is a sentiment which, unalloyed with arrogance and vain glory, is the greatest strength of a nation. The glory, pride and hope of this country is its free press, religion and schools, but we must do more to teach morals and patriotism in these schools to our institutions of learning are a better defence than the fleets and armies. The first business of the schools is to make good citizens, whatever else they do."

"Patriotism is built upon reason and supported by education. It is not confined to affairs of national interest, but to be found even in the narrow limits of the home. Any one who submerges his personal interests for the common good is truly patriotic."

"Pride in a nation's glory and blindness to its defects is ignorance, not patriotism. Loyalty and social service are the chief elements in the real thing and opportunity to exercise patriotism comes to all."

Endorses National Service.

General Hodgins endorsed the National Service movement most heartily and
