CZAR'S SIMPLE LIFE AT FRONT

Occupies Two Rooms For Personal Use, One as Bedroom, Other as Office—Meals Brief and Informal

Petrograd, Oct. 21.—The following authorized description of the emperor's life at the front has reached Petrograd.

"Headquarters have been established in a small two-story house in a white Russian city, the name of which is necessarily omitted. Emperor Nicholas occupies two rooms on the second floor—one as a bedroom and the other as an office. On the same floor are Minister of the Court, General Baron Fredericks and Palace Commandant, General Voeikov, each of whom occupies a single room. On the first floor are the emperor's physician and various persons of his suite. The number of servants has been cut to the minimum.

"Near the house, in government buildings and hotels, live Grand Dukes Cyril and Boris and Dmitri Pavlovitch and others of the temporary court.

"At nine o'clock in the morning the emperor, attired in a field uniform, walks to the office of the General Staff, accompanied by one of his officers. With General Alexieff, chief of staff, the emperor reads the reports and issues orders until one p.m. He informs himself concerning the conditions on all parts of the immense front, examines maps and discusses events. To the luncheon in the emperor's quarters are invited the high military officers and the foreign military observers, altogether a dozen persons. The luncheon is brief and simple. No wine is served.

"After luncheon the emperor chats with his guests. Two o'clock finds the emperor and General Alexieff again occupied with reports in the emperor's private office. In mid-afternoon the emperor motors for an hour or two and then returns to work until dinner is served at 7.30 o'clock. The dinner is of three courses, and is less formal than the luncheon.

"At nine o'clock in the evening, after brief conversations with his guests, the emperor returns to his office and works far into the night. General Alexieff frequently going there for a conference. The general staff works night and day."

"The steady person applied to a wealthy citizen for help and received the small sum of five cents. The giver remarked as he handed him the pittance: 'Take it, you are welcome; our ears are always open to the distressed.'"

"That may be," replied the recipient, "but never before in my life have I seen so small an opening for such large ears."

STEFANSSON FINDS UNSALTED OCEAN ICE

Explorer Also Disputes Nanzen and Peary on Height of Ice-Ridges 60 Feet High

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 21.—Much stained with smoke and seal oil, a letter has come to Prof. W. H. Hobbs, of the University of Michigan, from the Arctic explorer, Vilhjalmur Stefansson, from his camp on the southeast coast of Banks Land in about seventy-three degrees north latitude. This letter was written January 18 last.

Stefansson says that the ice of the Beaufort Sea, which is originally salt, becomes so fresh after two seasons weathering that the tongue can detect no saltiness in it. Bay ice in a single season is rendered fresh. Continuing Stefansson says:

"On a little trip during the absence of the sun I have with me your 'earth features' to read, something profitable when one circumstance or another keeps me in camp.

"I cannot read the reference now, but I think you speak somewhere of Nanzen's statement that pressure ridges of sea ice are never over thirty feet high. At any rate, I remember he says so in his 'Farthest North'.

"I have seen many pressure ridges of sea ice on top of a single piece that is over 60 feet high. I know several whaling captains who consider it a matter of common knowledge that pressure ridges

"Apparently Nanzen never saw—and it seems Peary never saw—ice pressure that compares with that on the Alaska north coast. Ice there is frequently so rough that a dog unhampered is unable to follow a man who by use of some form of Alpine method makes his way along."

WRECKS HIS AUTO AND RISKS HIS LIFE BUT SAVES THE KIDNIE

Waco, Ont., Oct. 22.—Dr. L. E. Dionne was returning home from a house where he had gone on an emergency call. He was at the wheel of his big touring car, with his chauffeur, Gilbert Boss, on the seat beside him.

As he was going down a grade in South street, Dr. Dionne saw three children playing in the gutter in front of the church. One of the children, a little Polish girl, started to run across the street just in front of his automobile, but slipped on the leaves and fell.

The doctor had no time to stop the car. His only choice was to run over the girl, not improbably causing her death, or risk his own life by an upset or collision. Without hesitation he chose the latter course.

Almon, at a right angle to the wheels, he dashed against a telegraph pole.

Dr. Dionne and Boss, though badly shaken up, were not thrown from their places and happily were not injured. But the fore part of the car was wrecked—lights, mudguards and the rest—causing damage of at least $200.

"Never mind," said Dr. Dionne, when witnesses of his act, who came to praise him, expressed regret for the loss; "I'm glad I didn't hit the kiddie."

MEDAL FOR HEROISM DELAYED 18 YEARS

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 22.—Chief Carpenter Charles Thompson of the Portsmouth Navy Yard has received a medal of honor from the Navy Department for his heroic act in saving the life of a young boy who was drowned in the harbor of Portsmouth, N. H., in 1897.

Mr. Thompson was on duty when the boy, a child of about five years, was seen struggling in the water. He immediately threw off his coat and jumped into the water, and after a struggle of some minutes, succeeded in bringing the boy to the shore.

Wilson came to the surface under the heavy sail. He was so exhausted he gave himself up for lost. Thompson saw the boy and risked his life to drag him to the boat. He had to support him for nearly ten minutes. In the meantime four of the other men had been drowned. A rescue had picked up the others and sailed away supposing no one else was left afloat.

With one hand Thompson swam the three miles to shore. He was an even better swimmer than he was a sailor. Both men were near death when they reached land.

GERMAN WANTS BIG INDEMNITY

Says Canada Will Pay up After War

WANTS ONLY $200,000

Damages Threatened For Charge That He Incited Dynamiters—Very Sorry For Canada and Canadians

Detroit, Oct. 22.—Albert Kallischmidt, when interviewed here denied absolutely that there was any foundation for charges laid against him in a true bill found by the grand jury in the Essex County sitting of the supreme court of Ontario. A reporter had pointed out to him that in his interview, in the Detroit Press he had neglected to speak definitely on that rather crucial question.

How then had it come that Kallischmidt and the others had testified that it was he who incited them to dynamite buildings in Windsor?

"It was the only one with whom they had come in contact," said Kallischmidt. "How then had it come that Kallischmidt and the others had testified that it was he who incited them to dynamite buildings in Windsor?"

"I amused him. It was so petty. If he went into the war it would not be on so small a scale. They would know all about it," said he. "I am, as it were, on the top of it. I can see the absurdity of it."

Would he go into the Canadian courts and fight his case. Certainly not. They were the courts of an enemy country. He had nothing to do with them.

He would say nothing about the case. The time for that had not yet come. It would come. Then he would have a lot to say. That would be at the end of the war, and that was not far off. Then he would demand $200,000 damages for the effect of the charges on his financial credit.

"You go to the bank with a charge like that against you and see what they say," said he. "If a complaint is laid before my government and they find that it is justified, they will see that it is included in the indemnity."

He cringed no doubt as to who would pay indemnity at the end of the war.

Sorry for Canada.

Mr. Kallischmidt was not in a belligerent mood. He was pensive and sorry for Canada. He was tired. He leaned his head against his hand and talked through the screen door. He had been aroused from sleep. He came down at five in a bath robe. It was six-thirty in the evening, and he had been playing tennis.

"I like Canada. I am very sorry for her. She should never have gone into this war. She has missed the greatest opportunity in her history. Where is she now?"

Beginning to Emigrate.

Mr. Kallischmidt drew a very dismal picture of what she is now, and an even more dismal picture of where she would be if she continued in her present state.

"We cannot do business in Canada," Kallischmidt. The caption said that he

Sure Way To Get Rid of Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.
