FRENCH PRESIDENT REVIEWS RUSSIANS

One of the outstanding figures in the present great war is President Poincaré of France. Calm, dignified—the elected head of a great republic cruelly tried in the great strife. Mr. Poincaré presents a picture for admiration. The Russian Ambassador to France, and French general are with him in the picture.

7,000,000 WOMEN WORK IN BRITAIN

375,000 Fill Places Formerly Held by Men

Many Trades Taught

Female Wearers of Trousers Increasing at a Rapid Rate in the Motherland

London, June 15.—It is estimated that the number of women now working in war and peace jobs exceed 7,000,000. Nothing is more noticeable in the aspect of the youthful and middle-aged civilian, and next month will probably see a marked diminution of even khaki-clad youngsters. There then will remain only the oldsters and weaklings.

The wholesale withdrawal of men from the commercial and industrial ranks has resulted in huge substitution of female labor for the purpose of maintaining the industrial output of the country. Many hundreds of women are training to become milkers and dairy hands. In Scotland and Northern Ireland this sort of work is being regularly undertaken by women while in Devonshire and other counties milking is being done even by young girls before they go to school.

Women are at the lathe in overalls and cap in the powder shed, working twelve hour shifts on the motor buses or fashioning metal, timber and leather for carting, driving and distributing. Before the war it used to be said that every Jack had his trade. The same can now be said of every Jill.

Women in trousers are becoming more and more numerous, they are donning them in greater numbers every day in order to cope with work where the skirt is found to be a hindrance. They do not dislike the change and it cannot be said to detract in any way from their native grace or carriage.

Napoleon Favored Trousers.

Napoleon it seems was a great believer in arming women in dress during the time of war. Dress does not make the man says the proverb but Napoleon found that it made the woman and that putting her into trousers made a world of difference to her work and strength.

Reliable English opinion is inclined to encourage women to adopt masculine attire for what all ought to be man's work, convinced that so dressed woman will give as good an account of herself as her absent male.

Many thousands of women and girls are serving the nation as munition workers. The Ministry of Munitions considers every case thoroughly, placing the workers, not only according to industrial fitness and home locality but also with thought for the lives women have previously led and are likely to lead after the war. Many of the women engaged in munition work are art students, musicians, embroideresses—girls who had been engaged in the fine arts and hope to be again. Once drafted into a factory the women are specially looked after by the Ministry as to hours accommodation and rate of payment. The wages are $5 a week as a minimum, and fit workers are soon able to earn $15 to $20 a week by piece work.

Employment for Women

The withdrawal of so many men from all trades and the transference of a large body of female labor from the staple industries to munition making and various other avenues of employment has led the Home Office and the Board of Trade to issue a series of pamphlets pointing out in detail the branches in which women can be employed—what relaxation of the requirements of the factory act are permitted and what arrangements are necessary to be made in factories to meet the introduction of female labor.

The industries and trades dealt with in this way so far are China and earthenware, India rubber, wood, cotton, woodworking, pottery and brick, color, paint, varnish, papermaking, hosiery, heavy clothing and others.

The estimated number of females engaged in work in substitution of male labor is as follows:

	Dec. 1915	Feb. 1916	April 1916
All trades	287,100	309,200	375,900
Under this category the main increases are as follows:
Engineering trades	70,300	117,400	162,300
Chemical trades	9,900	16,200	23,400
Textile trades	57,400	73,400	82,300
Clothing trades	30,400	42,300	50,400
Boot trades	29,500	35,000	42,300
Paper and printing trades	22,500	23,000	23,000
Wood trades	11,400	17,400	23,000
Other trades	27,000	37,000	42,300

"I called, sir," said old Jinks to the tailor, "in reference to the letter you sent about the way my son has treated you. I guess you will find him all right in the future, because he has promised to settle down."

"That doesn't interest me," replied the tailor, "I want him to settle up."

This list, short as it is, serves to show how wholeheartedly the Canadian profession has rallied to the call of empire, and in what a spirit of self-abnegation the sacrifice of the comforts and prizes of life has been made.
