

FAMOUS BRITISH WOMEN FOOTBALL PLAYERS

The Dick-Kerr football team of Preston, England, now touring the United States, who feel offended at the Dominion Football Association for having withdrawn permission for a Canadian tour. Out of eight games in the United States with male teams they have won four, lost two and drawn two. In a series of sixty games with British ladies' clubs they have registered fifty-nine victories and one draw. Besides many trophies they possess the "medal for the organization having performed the greatest service for ex-service men in the British Isles." On the left is Miss, Carmen Bonies, champion javelin-thrower at the Women's Olympiad.

ARRESTS IN N. Y.
FOR SHOPLIFTING
15,000 IN YEAR

Ninety-five Per Cent Are Women

One-half Go to Prison—The Chief Motive is Securing of Articles for Personal Adornment—Deserve Little Sympathy.

A thousand and thirteen women were arrested for shoplifting in a single New York department store in one year. More than half of them were sentenced to jail. The others were released without further punishment. Since there are at least a dozen other stores of this character in New York and hundreds of smaller establishments, the volume of arrests for shoplifting may be imagined. This one store arrested an average of three persons a day, so the total for the city must have been about 30, or 15,000 a year. If the same ratios held good, 5,000 of these unfortunate women were sentenced to jail. Some with a statistical talent ought to verify the figures, for if they are accurate here is a public scandal of the first magnitude.

The chief detective of one of the largest stores, where the thousand and thirteen women were caught in one year, gave the writer some impressions of shoplifters the other day while a girl who had just been caught sneaking out a table cover was being searched and questioned.

"Only a very small part of the arrested women were professional thieves. The rest were working girls or the wives of honest men. They stole not because they wanted something for nothing, the store detective said. The hunger for something that need not be paid for—that was his solution of the shoplifting enigma.

"Ninety-five per cent of our cases are women," said the detective. "When men steal they don't come to departmental stores. If they do it is almost invariably because they want to give some woman something they can't afford to buy. Men rarely if ever steal anything for themselves unless it is some special article, like a clock. Men seem to have a strong affinity for clocks.

"The women who give us all our trouble are of three classes—the professional thieves who are now few in number and give us less worry than ever before the unmarried working girl, and the middle-class wife, who has no reason in the world for stealing except the urge to get something for nothing.

"At certain hours of the day and on half holidays like Saturday afternoon the store is thronged with young women, many of them wage earners of limited means. Then we have to be very much on the alert, for some of these girls have a seemingly uncontrollable inclination toward silk stockings, camisoles, handkerchiefs, gloves, perfume and bits of novelty jewelry. But they take anything else they happen to fancy.

"Steal to Feed Vanity.

"Many married women take these things, but they also help themselves to all sorts of articles that may be used in their homes. Such matters are always secondary, however. The things women of these classes steal are nearly always articles of personal adornment—vanity feeders.

"It is easy to see how it works among these married women. Mrs. A. and Mrs. B. are married and earn the same pay, but Mrs. A. is always much better dressed and has many little luxuries which Mrs. B. cannot afford and whose possession by her friend she cannot understand. The explanation, we find it that Mrs. A.

ed women were professional thieves. The rest were working girls or the wives of honest men. They stole not because they wanted something for nothing, the store detective said. The hunger for something that need not be paid for—that was his solution of the shoplifting enigma.

"Ninety-five per cent of our cases are women," said the detective. "When men steal they don't come to departmental stores. If they do it is almost invariably because they want to give some woman something they can't afford to buy. Men rarely if ever steal anything for themselves unless it is some special article, like a clock. Men seem to have a strong affinity for clocks.

"At certain hours of the day and on half holidays like Saturday afternoon the store is thronged with young women, many of them wage earners of limited means. Then we have to be very much on the alert, for some of these girls have a seemingly uncontrollable inclination toward silk stockings, camisoles, handkerchiefs, gloves, perfume and bits of novelty jewelry. But they take anything else they happen to fancy.

"My Hands Trembled and I Could Not Sleep"

Mr. Thomas Honey, Brantford, Ont., writes—

DR. CHASE'S NERVE FOOD

50 cents a box, all dealers or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto.

"When I began taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was so nervous that when I picked up a cup of tea my hand would tremble like a leaf. I could not sleep well, could not remember things, and there were neuralgic pains through my body. After taking seven boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, however, I am in perfect health."

Something For Nothing.

"A bright salesgirl, who has been in the store for some months, can tell at a glance when a woman comes to the counter what she is in the store for. Every woman belongs to one of four kinds. She is in the store either to kill time while waiting for a friend or the matinee hour, in which case she looks at goods which she has no international skating championships at St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

YOU!
CORN'S
Important Foot Note—
Put one on—the pain is gone!
Dr. Scholl's
Zino-pads
FOR CORNS, CALLOUSES
AND BUNIONS

goes shopping twice a week and buys one article while she steals two. Sooner or later she is caught and disgraced, of course. Meantime, however, Mrs. B. is stirred with envy. She fairly eats heart out over the superior lot of Mrs. A. Then she is tempted in a store, takes something when she thinks no one is looking, is caught as she leaves the place and suffers disgrace and perhaps the wreck of her home.

"Girls who work in offices and factories are tempted and misled in the same way. Some girl receiving the same pay as her sisters, is better dressed and equipped with certain luxuries. She boasts that when she sees anything she wants she simply takes it. The store girls are horrified at first, but the temptation is too much for some of them and they soon imitate the first girl, with disastrous results before long.

"Girls and women who are tempted to steal should be warned that the chance of getting away without being caught is much smaller than is supposed. All stores have regular uniformed officers on duty, in addition to plain clothes men and a number of well-informed women cannot tell from shopgirls or shoppers. In addition, every clerk is on the watch, and it is from our salesgirls we recruit our women detectives. No shoplifter can operate very often without being caught by this force.

"A bright salesgirl, who has been in the store for some months, can tell at a glance when a woman comes to the counter what she is in the store for. Every woman belongs to one of four kinds. She is in the store either to kill time while waiting for a friend or the matinee hour, in which case she looks at goods which she has no international skating championships at St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

Guaranteed
Havana Filled.

CONGRESS SIZE

10¢

1400

CIGARS

CONGRESS 10¢ CLUB SELECTION 2 for 25¢ SPORTSMAN 15¢

ten of buying; or she is a paid shopper from some other store, sent to see how our prices compare with theirs; or she really comes to buy; or she has come to steal. Our more experienced girls almost never make a mistake. They can spot the time waster and the shoplifter practically every time. Naturally, when a girl thinks she has seen the latter she at once calls the attention of a detective, and that woman is shadowed as long as she stays in the place. If she takes anything we catch her as she leaves the store and we waste little sympathy on her.

FATHER CAN NOW LACE HIS BOOTS

Mr. Sweet, a Resident of Halifax, Says Everyone Should Know About Drego.

Gave Her Father Prompt Relief From Rheumatism and Stomach Trouble.

There is not a remedy on the market today having such a reputation as Drego for its power to overcome rheumatism, stomach, bowel, kidney and bladder trouble.

My Sweet, 12 Yukon St., Halifax, N. S., writes: "For a long time my father has suffered from rheumatism. Every joint and muscle in his body ached. His feet would swell so badly that he could not get into his boots. He also had stomach, liver and kidney trouble. Gas would form after meals and he complained of having pains across his back, also dizzy spells and bad taste in his mouth in the mornings. His bowels were never regular as he always had to be taking something.

"My friends induced him to try Drego. Now my father is quite regular. The swelling in his feet has gone, so that he can get into his boots without any trouble. His stomach, liver and kidneys are in much better shape. There are no pains in his joints and muscles.

"He has only taken one bottle as yet, but he fully intends to complete the treatment, as the results are wonderful and we have noticed a big improvement in him. We would not hesitate to recommend Drego to anyone, as we are thankful for what it has done for him in so short a time."

Go today to Ross Drug Co., St. John, and ask for Mr. Ranson, the Drego Expert, and let him explain the merits of this great remedy. There is no charge and he will tell you honestly if he believes Drego will benefit you.

Drego is also sold in other cities as follows:

Moncton—Geo. O. Spencer.
Charlottetown—E. A. Foster.
Summerside—Gallant Drug Co., Ltd.
St. Stephen—Clark's Drug Store.
Woodstock—Newman & Slipp.
Fredericton—Dibble's Drug Store, Limited.
Chatham—McKenzie's.
Bathurst—W. F. Pepper.

INTERNATIONAL SKATING MEET FOR ST. JOHN

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

St. John was awarded the International Skating Union of America trophy.

RUGBY GAINS IN POPULARITY

English Followers See Many Possibilities in It—A Study of Some of the Teams.

London, Nov. 7.—(Canadian Press).—One of the attractions of the Rugby game is its manifold possibilities, says a special correspondent of the London Times, who points out that as a counter-move to the advance of professional Association football in the United Kingdom the Rugby season has been lengthened in the west country, in the Midlands and in South Wales, where Rugby matches were in full swing early in September. By the many possibilities of Rugby the writer means the variation of methods and tactics and style which can be discovered in different parts of the British Isles—not to mention the Dominions and France—and the way in which these variations themselves vary from time to time.

Incidentally it is regarded as remarkable that in spite of the tremendous popularity of professional sport, the Rugby game is growing steadily in favor in Great Britain. Not only have the public schools and the Old Boy organizations resumed their activities with added zest since the war, but new clubs, like Birmingham, have more than doubled their existence. As for the slow but steady revival of the Rugby union in the north, it is perhaps the pleasant phenomenon of all.

The Times' correspondent advises fast and open play, and clever and original but scrupulous methods as providing the keynote of a "good" season, and not merely a successful season, and he is right. They have won the English Fifteen of two seasons ago, with all their defects, played attractive, original and open—desperately so at times—Rugby. They deserved their success, not so much because they won each of their matches, but because they made the selection committees and the critics and spectators think. They helped to prove once more what a great game Rugby can be.

Guy's Hospital alone of the London clubs had played a match up to September 23, but with the exception of Richmond, that doubtful distinction ended on that date. Last season, until the strain of too much warfare began to tell, Guy's Hospital was probably the best club in England. Their backs were undoubtedly the fastest combination, their half-backs as good as any, and their forwards grew more disciplined and intelligent than ever before. This year they will be without the very fast and effective wing, Danby, but there remain some first-class men.

Blackheath had a rather disappointing record last season, largely due to repeated changes of the team and to divided councils. The team this year is in better shape, though some valuable players have been lost through claims of the universities.

Richmond and the London Scottish have much ground to make up. Richmond's pack of forwards has proved their worth on many occasions, but what with injuries and over-individualism, the back division has never done quite justice to a club such as a famous still appeals strongly.

There are cheering signs that the Rugby game is making headway in the south-west of England is regaining its efficiency and popularity. Plymouth have produced backs of the old standard once associated with the defunct Davenport Albion Club, and as duced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely re-

"Rolling your own" is saving money for the other fellow — is it saving money for you?

Spend 15 cents on a packet of factory made cigarettes and you get 10. Spend 15 cents on a package of ORINOCO and you get 43—

Which is the better buy for you? And "Rolling your own" with ORINOCO gives you the best in a Virginia cigarette...

Roll your own with ORINOCO — It's easy

43 Cigarettes for 15¢

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any game but Rugby simply cannot live. And so on to Leicester and Northampton and Coventry and the rest of the Midland clubs. The advance made by the North Midlands in the County Championship last season was no mean accomplishment, and London clubs who have fixtures with Birmingham Club will be surprised at the progress made in that area.

In South Wales the game of Rugby still appears strongly. The four big clubs may not be so brilliant as in the past, but the rise of the lesser clubs continues apace, and one has only to study the results of matches and the scores to realize that whether for good or bad, or only temporarily, the old ascendancy of Newport, Cardiff, Swansea and Llanelli has been largely reduced. The effects of this were to be found in the Welsh International team last season, and they are likely to be found again this season.

There is a close association with the clubs of Newton Abbot, Torquay, Paignton, Totnes and Dartmouth, there is a really much healthy local rivalry, which always produces a number of good players.

A similar state of affairs exists in Somerset, with Bath and Bridgewater as the chief hopes of the country. Bristol and Gloucester, of course, are generally accepted as "big clubs," but it is only fair to state that the former has a lot of rival competition with which to contend, whereas in Gloucester any