THE razor was dull and the barber had been at the Zion temperance meeting the previous night. The result was that several chips were sliced off Gilhooly's upper lip, and there was an ugly cut made on his chin. "Can you give me a glass of water?" said Gilhooly. "Certainly, sir. Do you feel faint?" said the barber, as he handed the patient a shaving-mug full of ice-water. "No, no," replied Gilhooly; "I just want to find out if my mouth leaks."
