COMMERCIAL MEN HAVE CLUB HOUSE.

The Bell Building Will Be Formally Opened This Evening.

The Commercial Travellers' Club will be opened this evening and an excellent time is laid out for the Knights of the Grip and their friends. The Bell Building on the corner of Union and Prince William streets is now the travellers' headquarters, and the club opens with quite a large list of members. The reception this evening is not confined to the members alone, but the invitation is extended to any traveller who may be in the city, and he is requested to visit the club and bring his friends. The building has been comfortably fitted out from basement to top floor and is an ideal place for the traveller to spend a few spare moments when tired of the hotel office.

The top story is done with hardwood floors, steel ceilings and walls, and on this floor are four excellent rooms and a hall which is given up to billiards and pool, with also a private dining room in connection. On the next floor is the music room, library and smoking room. All have been nicely furnished and are comfortable. On the first floor is a large dining room handsomely decorated, also a reception room. On this floor is also a cooling room, which is in connection with the Turkish baths, which are situated in the basement. The building makes an ideal club.

The officers of the club are: Fred S. Hutchinson, St. Stephen, president; W. A. Cuthers, St. John, vice-president, and Frank Murdoch, St. John, secretary. Fred Barnett is steward, and the services of David Mitchell have been secured as chef.

ST. JOHN STAR.

ST. JOHN, N. B., JULY 11, 1903.

A NEW BRUNSWICK NOVELIST.

By reason of a misunderstanding, some reflections were made upon Mr. W. A. Hickman's New Brunswick hand book, published a year or two ago. The book was badly printed and the proof was not read at all, and some of the statements contained in the text were a little surprising. It is generally understood that this work of art and letters was considered unsuitable for circulation in the old country. By political critics the hand book was judged by a wrong standard. Mr. Hickman is a novelist and as such he must be judged. "The Sacrifice of the Shannon," now before us, is a work of fiction which pretends to be nothing else. Mr. Albert Hickman is the author and Briggs, of Toronto, the publisher. It may be bought from E. G. Nelson & Co.

If this volume were considered as immigration literature it might be thought a little too icy in its theme and setting, though there is nothing icy in its style. The book is a love story and a very good one, but it is also a story of adventure in the Gulf of St. Lawrence, where ice-breaking steamers, and ice boats, and strong men and women struggle with great forces and great dangers. There is also a graphic account of a yacht race at Carriboe, otherwise Pictou, in which Gertrude McMichael, daughter of James McMichael, the leading shipbuilder and shipowner in Pictou county, shows her skill and nerve. Miss Carmichael is the heroine of the story. The name of her father and the name of her father's ships suggests a late well-known shipowner and public man at New Glasgow.

Everybody in this book is surprisingly strong. The heroine, a singularly intellectual lady, sails her yacht in a gale with astounding courage and resource. She shines up the full height of the mast with an iron ball in her teeth and makes repairs. She beats everybody at tennis, plays and sings with power, and knows almost everything. The hero breaks across his knee two-inch sticks of firewood to work off his agitation. He lowers himself two hundred and fifty feet down the face of a rock by a three-inch rope with a disabled man tied to him. Another character gathers up a black birch knee weighing six hundred pounds and carries it from the station yard to his house to be used for firewood. An elderly engineer picks up a large and pugilistic stoker from where he had fallen on the ice and throws him as "if he had been shot from a gun" clear over the ice boat and a good ten feet beyond into a slush hole. Still another, a New Brunswicker, has a habit of amazing the multitude by buying half a dozen thick glass goblets and chipping them into splinters. These and other characters seem to be capable of unlimited exertion without fatigue, and some of them without sleep. There is little in the minor key. No one dies, no one is even ill, and generally all the people are in high spirits in the most perilous situations.

Naturally, such men, and such a girl, who "with a frolic welcome take the thunder and the lightning," will make things interesting when they get together in a situation which calls for the exercises of their powers and gifts. And that is what Mr. Hickman does with them. The author shows great familiarity with ice navigation and with the practical operation of marine engines. Mr. Hickman's attainments as a naturalist are well known. He is an easy and picturesque writer, full of character in his descriptions of the scenery of the Gulf, and no less enthusiastic in his account of the girl around whom the story revolves.

THE VISITING WAR SHIPS.

Vice-Admiral Sir Archibald Douglas, who would in any case be welcomed as an officer of His Majesty's navy, is doubly welcome as a native Canadian. He was born in Quebec some sixty years ago and his career in the navy reflects credit upon himself and the land of his birth. His flagship Ariadne, we believe, the largest warship that has ever visited this port. Her displacement is 11,000 tons, while the Blake is 9,000 tons, and the Crescent 7,500. But the Blake has a speed of 22 knots, while the Ariadne is one knot slower. The armament of the Ariadne and of her seven comrades of the Diadem class, comprises 16 six inch quick firing, 14 twelve pounder quick firing, and 20 small quick firing guns. She has three torpedo tubes. The Ariadne was the last of the eight to be launched and is five years old.

St. John welcomes the vice-admiral and his squadron not only for what they are, but for what they represent. They stand for the greatest navy in the world, a navy equal to that of any other two nations. They represent the power and dignity and authority of a great empire. In spite of all that has been said of armaments, and of the fact that the British empire without the British navy could not last a year. Nations of the world which are now her friends would rend her to fragments if she could not defend herself. This navy keeps the empire safe and at peace. It is not an instrument of destruction, but a means of preservation. Without it Britain and the colonies could not keep together. Without it Canada might need a standing army like that of European states to preserve her integrity. Some day Canadians will pay their debt to their fellow subjects who maintain this fleet. In the meantime the obligation ought at least to be freely acknowledged.

THE LOCAL FLEET.

While a squadron of the British navy enters the harbor of St. John, a local fleet leaves another St. John harbor for a cruise toward the north. The fleet of the Kennebec Yacht Club is continually increasing in numbers, and the membership is becoming larger every year. This year's cruise should be the most interesting in the history of the organization. Those who are so fortunate as to be able to take part in it have the prospect of a pleasant and wholesome outing, and those who do not envy them the week's enjoyment and will follow the cruise with their best wishes.

JEWISH MASSACRES.

LONDON, July 11.—The Daily Chronicle's correspondent at Berlin says the Jewish population of Cracow, Galicia, is excited by reports of anti-Jewish persecution similar to those at Kishineff. In the suburb of Kishineff, disturbances have broken out between Jews and Christians. It was reported at Kishineff that Russians were distributing poisoned candies to Jewish children in Galician towns.

LONDON, July 11.—The Times correspondent at Vienna says it is said in a despatch from St. Petersburg that the chief notary of Kishineff has committed suicide by shooting himself on account of the anti-Jewish riots. The inquiry concerning his participation in the recent Jewish massacres. The Russian minister of finance, who is at Kishineff, has ordered many arrests among the educated classes.

DEATH OF REV. JOHN READ.

ST. STEPHEN, N. B., July 10.—Rev. John Read, D. D., pastor of the Methodist Church, died suddenly of neuritis of the heart at 7 o'clock this evening. He participated in the services in this church on Sunday last, but had since been confined to his home. A fatal termination was not anticipated, and the end came very suddenly. He leaves a wife, one daughter and three sons.

The late Dr. Read entered the ministry in 1857. His first circuit was Andover, N. B., where he remained for two years. He was then transferred to Nashua, and from there to Gagetown, serving two years in each place. In 1863, Dr. Read was sent to Parrboro, N. S. After remaining there for three years, he was removed to Berwick, N. S., from there to Truro, and finally to Grafton Street Methodist Church, Halifax.

In 1878 he came back again to the N. B. Conference, and was stationed at Queen Square, St. John, where he remained three years. His next appointment was Exmouth Street Church, St. John. After leaving Exmouth street he was stationed at Marysville.

In 1888 he went to Charlottetown, P. E. I., but after three years' time he again returned to N. B., taking charge of the Wesley Central Methodist Church at Moncton. He was transferred to Wesley Memorial, in Moncton, in 1894. In 1896, Dr. Read came to St. John, remaining there until he went to St. Stephen in 1899.

Dr. Read was a representative at the general conference held in Toronto in 1892 and was also a member of the Evangelical Alliance which met in New York in 1874. He was president of the N. B. and P. E. I. Conference the year that the union of the Methodist bodies in Canada took place. He has also been chairman of the Charlottetown, Sackville, St. John, St. Stephen and Fredericton districts.

Dr. Read was present at the conference held in this city a few weeks ago, and took an active part in the proceedings. He presided at the organization of the Methodist Historical Society.

The late Dr. Read, besides being an able speaker and a man whose character was creditable in the extreme, was an excellent pastor, and worked his circuits to great advantage. He was thoughtful and studious, and his sermons always gave evidence of careful preparation. He took a deep interest in conference affairs and during sessions was always in his place. Consequently his absence will be greatly felt in the annual gatherings of the church.

Dr. Wilson, pastor of Zion Church, of this city, from whom a large part of the above information was gathered, has greatly started upon hearing of the sudden death of Dr. Read, and soon after conference. He had known Dr. Read for over forty years and considered the esteem in which he was held by the brethren. He was evidenced by the fact that all the gifts of his brethren were bestowed on him.

PORTLAND THE TERMINUS. This is the title of an article which recently appeared in the "Portland Daily Advertiser." It says that Portland is really going to be the great terminus of the new trans-continental railway line; that St. John may get a small share of the traffic, but that Portland is destined to get nearly all the business. The possibilities of Halifax are not recognized at all. The Advertiser claims to have direct information from a Grand Trunk director and it will be interesting to note how near it is to being right in its prophecy.

To us it appears that there will be plenty of business for all railway lines carrying Ogilvie's Flour and other products of the great west to the tide waters. The Ogilvie's Flour produced today is much greater than it was a few years ago and within the next decade it will no doubt be still further increased. It is now the popular flour among the best people of England and Canada and wherever good bread is appreciated Ogilvie's is sure to be a leader in the trade.
