ALL WRONG SOMEHOW.

Apparently the excitement of the noment has left the editor of the Trancript entirely under the control of a feverish, delusive and hysterical imagination. It is necessary to think so in order to relieve him from a more erious charge, for during the last few days it has become unsafe to believe a word that the Transcript says in its editorial columns. For instance, under the head "No Outside Dictation" the Transcript charges the Sun with making the announcement "that the election of Hon. Mr. Emmerson as minister of railways and canals will be opposed in Westmorland county." This is followed by a wild sort of lecture about dictation from outside. It is needless to say that there is not one word of truth in what the Transcript says. The Sun has not said that Mr.

"What the modifications are," says the Globe, "has not been made public, "but they must be considerably more "serious than the question which was "thought to be the obstacle to the " completion of the bargain, namely, "the form of the securities whch were "to be deposited as a guarantee for "the fulfillment of the undertakings "assumed. The question whether "Grand Trunk bonds were a sufficient "guarantee would hardly be big "enough to call for the special assem-"bling of parliament." It is not quite clear whether the Globe is speaking for the government or for Senator Cox. when it goes on to say that "the gov-"ernment drove a hard bargain with "Mr. Hays and his associates." Senator Cox may be responsible for the statement that "Mr. Hays' friends in "London seem to consider that the " conditions are too stringent, and pre-"sumably they will not go on with the "enterprise unless they are modified." Having drawn from this the conclusion that the government must have acted in the public interest, the Globe disclaims the purpose of weakening the hands of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but bad it. winds up with the statement that "it " is unquestionably the fact that there "is a strong desire that the govern-"ment project should go through, and "that they (the government) will be "supported in granting such fair con-" cessions as will ensure the early pro-"secution of the work."

Evidently it is not a question of guarantee. The company wants larger concessions than that. But it hardly follows that because the promoters want better terms that the government has made a good bargain for the people. Mr. Hays and Senator Cox are not too modest to ask that a good bargain should be made still better. They may consider that the prospects have been greatly improved by the effacement of Mr. Blair. At all events the government is on the eve of an election. and as they have committed the ministers to some extraordinary statements of the advantage of the project, and its absolute necessity, it may seem possible to "hold them up" for concessions. The Globe attributes to the friends of Mr. Hays the intention of refusing to go on with the enterprise unless the contract is changed. This is a cool way to get clear of a contract, and indicates an opinion that the government is quite helpless to enforce an obligaapproachable.
