n which he sat next to Richard Croker and, with uncovered head, bowed and smiled, to the thousands who cheered him. Forty Second street presented an animated scene. From Lexington avenue on one side to Sixth avenue on the other the side-walks were lined with the populace. At 2.35 o'clock the carriages containing the Tammany Hall reception committee rode to the annex. William R. Hearst led the way, followed by Richard Croker, O. H. P. Belmont, president of the borough; James J. Coogan, James Shevlin, Thomas Nixon, Lawrence Delmour and about a dozen others. Three cheers for Croker were given.

dozen others. Three cheers for Croker were given. The narrow passageway along the tracks was a seething mass of people when the engine of the Bryan train blew its warning whistle. Then came the mad scramble to reach the rear car of the train in which Colonel Bryan was supposed to be. Mr. Croker, Mr. Hearst and the other mem-bers of the reception committee tried to walk in a dignified manner toward the train to greet Mr. Bryan, but the crowd was too great. They were pushed and shoved and hustled along until they had almost to break into a run before they could swing themselves upon the rear plat-

Mr. Bryan entered the garden at 7.15 o'clock. As Colonel Bryan, escorted by Mr. Croker, mounted the speakers' stand the cheering was continuous. The two climbed the stairs and made their way to the front followed by the reception com-mittee. Mr. Bryan and Mr. Croker fre-quently bowed to the vast audience. Just behind the two, Mayor VanWyck, escort-ed Edward M. Shepard, who acted as chairman of the meeting. The cheering continued, near dying down, now being re-chairman of the meeting. The checking continued; now dying down; now being re-newed with increased vigor. Then Mr. Croker rose, hesitated a moment and rais-ed his hand for silence. Instead of ceasing the cheers broke forth
