It was on February 6 last that the Himera was lying at anchor a little below the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor, with two tags alongside, preparatory to shifting into Eric Basin. She was just getting in her cable when the Morgan line steamship El Cid, bound from New York to Galveston, was passing out to sea. The steering gear of the El Cid gave out when she was a little above the Himera and the El Cid's engines were reversed, with the Lodge was presented with the sum of ST. El Cid's engines were reversed, with the result that her head was thrown to starboard, and she struck the Himera a glanc-ing blow on the starboard bow, and pass-ing all along that side, did extensive damage to the plates from stem to stern.

Fortunately the pilot on the Himera had noticed the El Cid, and had put the Himera's engines astern, or she would probably have been cut in two.

The damage received by the El Cid was trifling, but the repairs to the Himera took between two and three weeks.

At first the El Cid did not actually dispute her lightlifty for afterwards the depute her liability, but afterwards the de-fence was set up on her behalf that the tence was set up on her behalf that the Himera was anchored in the fairway of the stream. The El Cid was libelled, and bonds were given in her behalf by E. H. Harriman, the well-known millionaire.

The evidence of Captain Lockhart and crew of the Himera was taken before the court strengtrapher and also the evidence. court stenographer, and also the evidence of part of the crew of the El Cid. The case came before Judge Holt, in New York, on June 11 and 12. Henry W. Goodrich appeared for the Himena and Mr. Maxwell Evarts for the El Cid. Further of the case of ther witnesses were examined and the case was adjourned till June 16, when both lawyers addressed the court. Judgment was reserved, and, as stated above, it has been given in favor of the Himera.
