Editor's Talk

THE current issue of the "Canadian Courier" is the largest ever issued. It contains 52 pages, of which 100 columns are reading matter, illustrations, special photographs and news features.

We believe that no such regular Christmas number of any Canadian publication was ever before presented as a bonus to its subscribers in size, character of contents, wealth of fiction, illustrations and special features. No special issue of this paper has been the occasion of so much careful selection of good material and exclusion of the merely mediocre. With one exception the short stories are the work of well-known Canadian writers. The illustrations to the stories are all by equally well-known Canadian artists.

The special pictorial features occupy seven pages. Opinions may differ as to which of these is the most interesting. Perhaps the popular vote would decide in favour of the human Christmas tree. Those who like best the English idea of Christmas will prefer the two pages of colour-pictures. Masterpieces of Christmas painting and old carols are represented by two pages of plates from famous pictures. There are two pages of decorative photographs. Of the stock features there is no need of mention. Most of the regular edition of the "Canadian Courier" is outside of the twenty extra pages. And we have been compelled to hold over two pages of special music prepared for this number until the issue of the following week.
