Nuclear Arms Unnecessary

are not up in arms over nuclear arms. I reached this conclusion by asking thirty-three students: "Do you thing Canada should have nuclear arms?

Twenty-four replied no, they didn't think Canada should have nuclear arms.

"I feel myself that the money spent on defense could be much better spent for other purposes. If someone doesn't get off the continual arms race that is taking such a large percentage of the world's money resources the prospects are going to get continually worse. It's not just the fact of nuclear weapons but all the money that's being wasted on them. It's pitiful and we're supposed to be a civilized country.

"No," replied a medical student, "we should chuck them all and concentrate on nerve gas, it's more efficient and less messy,

"No," replied an ROTP type. "It photo by Kendel Rust power. All armed forces are train-

The majority of U of A students ed to use nuclear weapons." He himself had spent the summer learning what to do with the mighty H. Don't add my name to it or I'll lose my $128 a month, he cautioned.

STUPIDEST CLUB

"No, we bloody well shouldn't" screamed CODE. "There are a few idiots in Ottawa who are willing to betray the poor blank-faced Canadians in order to advance their political careers and to become immortal in history as foundation members of the Canadian branch of the Stupidest Club in the World."

"No, Canada shouldn't." Another agreed. "Why waste our worry when the Americans will defend us?"

One extremist disagreed with is. "Yes, Canada should have nuclear weapons; we're letting the Americans defend us. If there is ever a war we won't be able to get nuclear arms right away. We've got to do something ourselves.

His lunch-mate took exception to this view. "No, we'll never get them without American control. The more nuclear weapons around the world, the more chance some slob is going to start a war.'

FIFTEEN AGREE TO ARMS

"That's so much BS", replied the extremist. "That chance is so negligible, I feel that it has been blown up beyond proportion.'

Fifteen others agreed, some not as impassionately.

"Yes, if it wern't for the US, Russia would have run through here by now. At present the best equipment we have is old army school buses.

"Canada should have nuclear arms. Otherwise the armed forces are impotent. As it is the armed forces might as well be scrapped to buy monogrammed toilet paper for the White House for a year.'

"Yes," said another. "I don't see why we shouldn't. The large powers have no more right than we. But mind you, why should anyone have them?"

My questions came at the right NFCUS membership now stands at time to soothe souls. Like "so what

UN Model Assembly Convenes Dec. 3, 4

The purpose of the UN Club is to increase interest in and knowledge of the UN, its operation and place in world affairs. The annual Model General Assembly, to be held Monday and Tuesday, Dec. 3 and 4 in Con Hall, is the club's main activity.

On the first night the Assembly debates one main resolution. Students representing various states de-bate this resolution, presenting the views of the state they represent.

The second evening is devoted to Main resolution this year involves Angola, an insignificant Portuguese territory in West Africa which could be a repetition of the Congo. The UN policy of intervention in such eases will be reviewed. CONGO REPEAT?

The Portugeuse have experienced difficulties maintaining their control over Angola. If they, as the Belgians before them, are forced to pull out of their African possessions, what resolutions arising from the various should the UN policy be? If the committees which meet earlier in the UN decides, as it did in the case of the Congo, to consider intervention, should it try to move in before or after the possible departure of the Portuguese?

How, in this event, should the UN the financial and political and almost destroyed its operation in the Congo?

What would be the purpose of such intervention? If the purposes of the UN have been to curtail and to prevent the complete collapse of newly independent areas, have these purposes been successful?

These are samples of questions students seem to talk about. Here is an opportunity to attempt to resolve some of them.
